I am thankful to my supervisor Dr. Chandreyi Niyogi for her guidance and valuable suggestions that helped to make this thesis a better and a more incisive one. Special thanks are also due to the professors of the English Department, Jadavpur University and the library staff of the American Information and Resource Centre for their constant support and encouragement. As I have progressed with this thesis on the Black family I have realized with an unerring clarity that my family will always remain an indispensable part of my existence. I wish to thank my parents, my sisters, my brothers-in-law, my nieces, my uncles and aunts—the members of my family who have helped me through every sort of crisis and have been a constant source of inspiration. I am really blessed to have been born into such a family. However, there is also my ‘spirit family’ that I have to thank. This is the family I found by sheer chance (and was not born into). It consists of Prof. Tapati Talukdar, Prof. Kumkum Sengupta and Prof. Sabitri Sengupta (my colleagues at Barasat College) and Mr. Shyamal Mitra whose solicitude over my academic pursuits has touched and encouraged me everyday. I am deeply indebted to the personnel at Dhar Brothers who have been responsible for the printing of this thesis. Their patience and professionalism deserve special praise. Thanks are due to Dr. Prateeti Bhattacharya who directed me to Dhar Brothers when I was floundering with the typing of the thesis. Finally, I remain eternally indebted to my late teacher, Prof. Prabhas Kumar Sinha. He taught me the value of persistence and curiosity. I will always miss you and try to do justice to your legacy.
