ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

To Dr. Dilbagh Singh, my guide and teacher, for his painstaking struggle with my manuscript, his eye for subtle details, his informality. He made me work hard and if the dissertation finds a respectability, academic or otherwise, it is because he compelled me to rework my ideas and arguments, my method and conclusion. I am indebted to him from the deeper recesses of my 'self', and words can only be a poor substitute.

And to, Prof. Satish Chandra, a wonderful teacher, who by his sheer vastness of insight would make all efforts at academic level, incomplete. It was this sense of incompleteness which helped me to learn as a student. I was fortunate to have him as a teacher and for whatever little I could in the huge terrain of social sciences.

It is a genuine pleasure to have a chance to express my gratitude for 'friends' acts of intellectual nurturance. Rather than discriminate among those who solicited commented on or criticised each paragraphs, let me simply assure them of my thanks for their different kinds of help. Special appreciation must be extended to Bharat Shekhar, who read some of my script with his characteristic analytical acumen. And Radha, who once again proved to be my ideal reader, in more ways than one. Amit and Shому deserve thanks for periodically reminding me that there is life away from 'written words'. And to my 'brother' Ajay, who always brought me forth, the 'vinegar of technicalities & 'representation'; of sorrows & 'perfection'.
Finally I would like to extend my sense of gratitude to Sandeep who helped me in typing it out.

Let me also express my thanks, to the staffs of Maharashtra State Archives, Bombay; The Pune Archives, Pune; The Gokhale Institute Library; and the Jayakar Granthalaya; Pune Vidypity, BISM Pune; all of them had been co-operative in my studies and material collection.

In the end I would like to acknowledge whatever mistake that occur as strictly mine.
