ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

These acknowledgements can convey only partially the debt that is owed to the people who have provided to me their advice, information and most of all, patience, during the most testing times of my life.

First and foremost, I wish to express my gratitude to my supervisor, Professor Yogendra Singh, Centre for the Study of Social Systems, School of Social Sciences, Jawaharlal Nehru University, whose valuable suggestions, helped shape many of the ideas that fill this work. His gentle demeanour, belies his strong grounding in the subject. The initial phase of extensive reading which he encouraged, gradually gave way to his focussed theoretical inputs. Through academically persuasive skills, he was able to keep me on track and forge ahead with renewed enthusiasm.

Mr. Rajeshwar Dyal, Project Advisor, Friedrich Ebert Stiftung, has been like a key collaborator for parts of this study. When the idea for this work had germinated around 1990, and I met him, he generously shared his thoughts, on the bases of his projects at the Indian Institute of Mass Communications, where he was the Research Officer, then. He has provided fruitful assistance for the case studies, despite his extremely busy schedule.

The indefatigable Sociologist from Jamia Millia, Dr. Mohammad Talib rendered valuable help by reading and providing very insightful suggestions for my final draft. I would also like to take this opportunity to thank the library staff of JNU, Press Council of India, Rattan Tata Library, Indian Institute of Mass Communications, Teen Murti, British Council, and American Centre for their kind and willing assistance. In assembling, coding and computer analysis of data, for my questionnaire, I have received help from Dr. P.V.S. Kumar of National Institute of Science, Technology and Developing Studies and my Hindu College colleague, Kamal Nain from the Statistics department. My friends Bobby and Bhumika helped with the graphs.

To many of those respondents who tolerated my intrusion and scrutiny, I wish to put on record my sense of gratitude and appreciation. I must confess, quite a number of them, gave me ample reasons to almost abandon my project, with their supercilious airs, but many facilitated my 'going on'. This they did by their little gestures of timely responses or their willingness for short, informal but extremely informative interviews. Amongst the most forthcoming were our "witness to history" Mr. Devdutt and others like Mr. K.K. Katyal, Mr. Ajit Kumar, Mr. Vijay Sanghvi, Ms. Manisha Jain, Mr. Bhushan Raina, Mr. Girija Shankar Kaura, Mr. Vishal Thapar, Mr. Alok Mehta, Mr. Shubendu Mukherjee, Ms. Anita Katyal, Ms. V.D. Nangia, Mr. Asish Mullik, Mr. Balraj Arora, Ms. Rajalakshmi, Mr. Vinit Wahi, Mr. S. Viswam, and some others too from various newspaper organisations like The Hindustan Times, The Times of India, The Pioneer, The National Herald, The Deccan Chronicle, Maalai Malar, Mathrubhumi, Gujarat Samachar, Asian Age, Anand Bazar Patrika, The Hindu, Qaumi Awaz, Punjab Kesri, Pragativadi, Sandesh, Nai Duniya etc. I am also deeply indebted to my school friend Venu Menon of 'Corporate Voice' who had introduced me to a number of his journalist friends for my research work. Unfortunately, his untimely demise last year, will never make it possible for me to say 'Thanks'.

Dr. Amrik Singh's keeping a tab on the progress of my work, by intermittent queries from me or, my father (who was his student, at college) also kept me on my toes. Other friends and family members were also contributors in some way or the other. Rishi, Ravi, Nandini, D.J. and Avinash turned out to be 'concerned collaborators' at various stages of my work.

My deepest appreciation lies for my friend and husband, Manish, who has not only shared with me the thrills and trials of being part of a two-career family, but also constantly goaded me to complete this work, with a commitment that can only come from a concerned partner in progress. My daughter, Apurva, has endured a lot, in the entire seven years of her life. I hope to make up, for that. Despite a comparatively different background, my parents-in-law at Ujjain, provided great moral support by incessant queries about the nature and stage of my work's progress, which I reckon must have demanded a great fortitude. I am also grateful to Mr. T.M. Varghese, JNU who typed my drafts on his computer, in an efficient and timely manner.

Without the institutional support and exasperatingly frequent reminders by Mrs. Mandish Kaur and S. Pritam Singh, my parents, this work would probably not have seen the light of the day.

Needless to add, all interpretations and conclusions here are my own and I am fully responsible for errors, if any.
