ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Words fail to express my deep sense of gratitude to my Guru, Prof. Anuradha Gupta whose valuable insights, inspiring guidance and constructive criticism helped me at every stage of my work. He has been my constant source of inspiration and intellectual support.

Once in South Africa for field research, I received overwhelming support from different quarters. I am greatly indebted to Prof. Francis Wilson who organised my stay in South Africa, guided me to good research institutes, established contacts for my interviews and hosted me in his house. I render my sincere thanks to Tim and Ilse Wilson, Lindy Wilson, Cos and Snokes Desmond, Lynn and Lesley Foster, Ethne Davey, Sheila Weinburg and Rhoda Kadalie whose hospitality, care and concern made an extended period of research possible in South Africa. But for them I would not have completed my field work even partially. I thank Daniel, Mark, Ayaz, Sten, Cal Le Roux, Ismail Ibrahim Ismail, Omar and Naseem Badshah, Claire, Lee, Paul, Lata Reddy, Ashutosh Aggarwal, Ruby and Vanishree who helped me in various ways.

The thesis would not have taken its present shape had it not been for the co-operation of many South African women who shared their views, ideas and feelings with me. I profusely thank each one of them for their time, patience and interest in my research. Their interviews undoubtedly gave my study a sense of purpose and authenticity. Interviews with Fatima Meer, Shanthie Naidoo, Amina Cachalia, Dorothy Nyembe, Sitaben Dhupedia, Rhoda Kadalie, Mary Burton, Margaret Nash, Ingrid Leroux and Lyndi Zulu were of immense help.

I extend my thanks to the staff at the Indian Consulate Generals, Johannesburg and Durban, the Historical and Literary Papers, William Cullen Library of University of Witwatersrand, Library at University of South Africa, South African Labour Development Research Unit, Library of the Department of African Studies, University of Cape Town, Women's Health Project of South African Institute of Medical Research, ANC Women's League, National Women's Coalition, Training and Resources for Early Education, Durban and South African Institute of Race Relations.

I extend my sincere thanks to the High Commissioner Mr. Jerry Matsila and his wife Francisca Matsila for showing keen interest in my subject. I am extremely grateful to Michele Schoeman who has been a constant source of moral support. I am greatly touched by her affection and concern. Her help and encouragement literally saw me through difficult times. My thanks are due to Yaco Schoeman for his kind assistance. I also thank Mrs. Rauna Kaapanda, Mrs. Phumla Moecketsi and Mrs. Jenny Forrest for their interest in my research.

I am indebted to my parents for their trust and confidence in me. Their affection and understanding is responsible for the successful completion of my work. The love and concern shown by my grandparents - late Shree N. G. Williams, R. J. Kripamani and K. Nagamma kept me going. My sisters Sumana, Spandana, Sahana and my brother Rakesh who have always been by my side deserve a special mention. I am so thankful to Chakravarty for his deep concern and tremendous boost. I invariably fall short of words to express my feelings and gratitude to Morali and Maneela for all their affection, care and concern. But for them, I would not have been able to complete this work. I also thank Ramu for her timely help. My sincere thanks to Amal and his parents for their support. I thank Sreenivas and Sree Krishna for their constant boosting apart from giving useful suggestions. Chandra, Geethika, Gawri, Sheela and Vani have always been there encouraging me.
