

Hadjisymeou and Georgia, (2010). Occupational Stress in Secondary Education in Cyprus: Causes, Symptoms, Consequences and Stress Management. Thirty eight schools with 553 teachers

Jones, F., and Bright, J., (2001). Stress should be used as an umbrella term that includes a range of potentially demanding environmental stimuli and responses and other variables. Research and Reflection on Education. Vol.10 No.01, ISSN: 0974 – 648X.

Obanya, (2002). Academic staff may be exposed to stressful work conditions if not properly handled. Journal of Research, v6 n2 p14-20 Fall-Win 2011.

Vipinder Nagra, (2013). Stress among teacher educators has the potential to impact their own performance, achievement level of the student’s teachers, and even the education system. McGraw Hill Company, New York.

Wagner, Lori A., (2009). Study was to measure what factors impact the stress levels of probationary teachers, International Journal of Research and studies Vol.27 n1 p107-115.

Webster, et al. (2011). Appraisal mediate the relationship between these stressors and outcomes (i.e., strains, job dissatisfaction, and turnover intentions). Journal of Science Teachers Association of Nigeria, Vol. 18, No.1.

