ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is lucid to keep in mind that gratitude, which is a noble moral action, is regarded as the sacred duty of man. We were born, grown up, studied, as well as have understood and distinguished between right and wrong only account of the kindly protection and care of ancestors, parents, teachers, relatives, and friends and even on account of someone whom we never know before and whom we used to hate due to his faults. Therefore, it is in the bounden duty to be deeply grateful to all the people who are near to and far from us. It is the best practice to try to do good ourselves and practise sending our energy of true love and compassion to them daily. Besides that, we are silently and deeply thankful to our environment on which we get our foods, drinking water, lodging, and clean air. We vow not to be harmful to not only human beings but also to animals and vow not to destroy our environment. Thus, gratitude is a special kind of food for the development of mental life of man. It is also an extremely important factor for one who wants to be successful in all aspects of his life.

Indeed, this research project has been completed by uncountable aids from many individuals directly and indirectly. By expressing acknowledgements, I would hereby like to express my gratefulness to all those concerned.

First of all, with deep gratitude and respect, I do pay homage to my Most Venerable Thich Dong Chon, Most Venerable Thich Giac Quang, and Venerable Thich Giac Ngo who have instructed and guided me since I have entered the Vietnamese Buddhist Sangha till now. By their valuable teachings, I have a good chance of widening my view not only in the study, living and behavior but also in the transformation of consciousness.

I would like to thank the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam for allowing me to study in India and the Government of India for permitting me to undertake my research project. I pay by most respectful homage to the Most Venerable and Superior Monks in the Managing Board.
of Danang Buddhism who have given me confidence and advantages during the period of my study in India.

On the completion of this work, I am deeply grateful to my great teacher, Prof. Shailaja Bapat, who is one of the most respectable teachers of the Department of Sanskrit and Prakrit Languages, University of Pune, whose life is only for the educational career and contribution. During the process of the research, she gave guidance to me about much useful knowledge on the research methodology as well as offered valuable thoughts and suggestions for the thesis. I express my sincere gratitude to my guide for her kindly and careful supervision and encouragement of the entire work.

I express my grateful thanks to Dr. Shailaja S. Katre, Head and other Professors, Readers, and Lecturers in the Department of Sanskrit and Prakrit Languages, University of Pune, who kindly give me impeccable suggestion and valuable attitudes and provide to me departmental facilities whenever the need arose. I offer my deeply grateful thanks to the staff of Jaykar, C.A.S.S libraries in University of Pune and University library in the University of Delhi.

I would like to express my deep-felt thanks to all authors and those whose valuable ideas and books have made my research work less difficult. Honestly, this is my first attempt of doing a research work but I hope to be encouraged by the good opinions from scholars, teachers, and friends here, there and everywhere.

Last but not the least, I cannot forget the kindly support and aid of my brethren, Vietnamese students who are studying at University of Pune and University of Delhi. With loving-kindness and compassion, I pray for and do the transference of merit to my disciples - Thich Thanh Hien and Thich Thanh Duc, Buddhist followers, my parents, brothers, sisters, and relatives who have supported and shared with me very much in life.

May the human world be free from hunger, war and hatred!
May “global warming” be controlled the quicker, the better!
