ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to my supervisor, Prof. Yogesh Sharma, without whose guidance and support this thesis would not have been possible. To him goes the credit for motivating me to explore non-Indian history and to learn French language for that purpose. During the last five years, he has been a constant source of inspiration for me.

Prof. Cornelius J. Jaenen, my co-supervisor at the University of Ottawa, has made a seminal contribution to my doctoral research. As an internationally reputed expert in the field of French-Canadian studies, he provided a meaningful orientation to my research and helped me formulate my ideas on a difficult and, in India, largely unexplored area. I am highly grateful to him.

I would also like to thank Prof. Dilbagh Singh whose encouragement and help have been valuable for the completion of this thesis. My interactions with him extending over several years have played a crucial role in teaching me at least some academic rigour and discipline for which he is rightly known.

Prof. Bhagwan Josh, who guided my research in M.Phil, has immensely contributed to my engagement with history. I would always remain indebted to him for giving me his valuable time in my formative years as a history student. In particular, discussions with him have always had an intellectually vivifying effect on me.

I must also take this opportunity to thank the Center for Historical Studies for supporting me in my research. The Junior Research Fellowship awarded by the University Grants Commission gave me financial support for five long years, without which my doctoral research would have been difficult to carry on. I am equally grateful to the Shastri Indo-Canadian Institute for awarding me an eight-month-long doctoral fellowship for my research visit to Canada and for making all the necessary arrangements for my stay there. The Institute of Canadian Studies at the University of Ottawa deserves my deepest gratitude for accepting me as a research affiliate and for extending all possible facilities for my work. The institute was an ideal place for research in Canadian history and my interactions with all the friends there have immensely benefited me. It was largely because of these friends that I was able to enjoy both my work and stay in Ottawa. I would also like to thank Erin, Jean Michelle, Karin and Steve with whom I shared an apartment in Ottawa and who made me feel at home in unfamiliar surroundings.

Help and support from family and friends have also been crucial in the successful completion of this thesis. I would like to express my deep sense of gratitude to my family, especially my parents, my sister and my wife, who have always stood by me. There are a number of friends who have helped me in various ways. In particular, I would like to thank Ashok, Avinash, Prashant, Sudheer and Vishal for helping me in various ways.
