Acknowledgement

This thesis has benefited from the "intellectual property" of several individuals who have freely shared their ideas, provided information, and contributed to my understanding of the subject.

I sincerely thank my supervisor, Professor Christopher S. Raj, for his guidance and encouragement not only in my academic pursuits, but also in my personal life. Professor Raj has never failed to be understanding, patient and calm in helping me to overcome any difficulties in reaching my goal.

My family has been much more than a source of enormous moral support. My father was a source of inspiration. He untiringly read draft chapters of my thesis and offered useful suggestions. My mother has, without complaint, stood by my side through my personal problems, in spite of the difficulties she had to endure. My brother was always ready to lend a helping hand and went out of his way to provide any assistance I needed. I can honestly say that this thesis would not have been completed without the help of my parents and brother.

I am extremely grateful to the Fulbright Foundation for granting me a predoctoral fellowship that enabled me to conduct field work for my thesis in the USA for seven months. This fellowship provided me not only funding for living and studying in the US, it also permitted me to travel and meet academicians, lawyers, and government officials in various parts of America. I thank the USEFI staff, especially Mr. George, and Dr. Lavakare, Sarina, Lakshmi and Kiran, for all their help. I thank the Friends of Fulbright India for providing me a travel grant. As a Fulbright scholar, I was affiliated with the University of California, Berkeley, and Harvard University. Both these institutions provided me with excellent library and computer facilities. I am extremely thankful to Professor Kiren Chaudhry, who was my academic advisor during my affiliation with the Department of Political Science, University of California, Berkeley. Dr. Chaudhry provided me valuable guidance in my research and always showed concern for my personal well being during my stay there. Professor Deborah Hurley, my academic supervisor in Harvard, was also very kind and helpful. I audited two courses in the University of California, Berkeley, one under Professor Haas (Theories of International Relations) and one under Professor Beth Simmons (International Political Economy). I thank both these Professors for this great learning experience. I thank Professor Scotchmer and the Public Policy class for allowing me to present a paper on my research. The interaction with the students and Professors during this presentation enabled me to clarify my thoughts and the paper I presented forms a part of my thesis.

I would like to thank ACTS (African Center for Technology Studies), Nairobi, Kenya, for funding my participation in the International Conference on the TRIPS/CBD Relationship. I will never forget the wonderful people I met at this Conference and the opportunity it provided me for learning from experts in my area of research. The paper I presented at this Conference is a part of my thesis, and I was able to gather important insights for my research through this Conference.

Research work for the National Working Group on Patent Laws provided me the opportunity to interact with various individuals involved in the patent issue in India. I thank Mr. B. K. Kealya, Convenor of the Group, for allowing me to assist in research and for sharing with me his expertise on the topic.

Several individuals both in the US and India have contributed to this thesis by giving me information, reading and commenting on parts of my thesis, and granting me interviews. It is not possible to mention all of them, but I would like to express my gratitude to the following: Professor Susan Sell, Professor Peter Drahos, Professor Christopher May, Dr. Calestous Juma, Professor Brian Wright, Professor Ajit Karnik, Ms. Susan Bragdon, Mr. David Downes, Ms. Jayashree Watal, Mr. Peter Thomas, Mr. Tony Lavina, Mr. Avani Vaish, Mr. Ajay Malhotra,
Mr. Michael Gollin, Mr. Peter Jutro, Dr. Josh Rosenthal, and Professor Mary Carras. I remain solely responsible for any inconsistencies in my work.

I want to thank the individuals whom I met in WTO and WIPO during my stay in Geneva for their help and for use of these libraries. I wish to thank the staff at the Calcutta Patent Office who were extremely helpful in locating material.

Friends and family members who have stood by me have been an invaluable source of strength. Among the many number of them are: Sahad, Cherian (especially for help with graphs, formatting and moral support!), Susan, the BITV staff and all those who helped me during the crisis, Janardhan, Meena, Anshu, Melani, Shaker and family, Anil and Mellissa (who read part of my thesis and gave me suggestions), Abha and Seema. My brother and his friends, Reshma, Sanjay, Praveen, Bakshi and Sarah for the wonderful time and help during my stay in the US. A special thanks to Girish for his kindness and encouragement!

Many others have extended their support in a variety of ways, and have graciously welcomed me into their homes when I needed a place to stay during my field work. Although I am unable to list all your names here, I sincerely appreciate your help.
