Acknowledgement

This academic endeavour has the support of many—support by way of excellent guidance, significant academic inputs, unrestricted sharing of knowledge, resources and experience, insightful discussions, priceless words of encouragement, unconditional camaraderie and above all, immeasurable and uncomplaining sacrifices. I consider myself immensely fortunate to be in the midst of an occasion that offers me the opportunity to recognise these invaluable contributions. I must admit that I am a bit overwhelmed—overwhelmed with elation, remembrance, appreciation as well as a touch of audacity in my effort to portray their contribution in terms of mere rhetoric.

I am immensely grateful to my supervisor, Professor Amitabh Kundu for his exceptional guidance that transformed my fairly scattered ideas and intentions into a cohesive whole through extremely productive interactions. All through these seven years of academic association with him, I have been particularly motivated by his invariable insistence on precision that always stimulated me to take a more intensive and rigorous view of the relevant issues and I aspire to inculcate this aspect in my future academic or professional ventures.

Next, I would like to thank the other faculty members of the Centre who shared their precious time and experience in supporting this work. I am particularly grateful to Dr. Dipen Das for the assistance he provided in designing the questionnaire for the case study of urban slums. He also shared his observations from the field and in the process prepared me for the survey, which was altogether an enlightening experience. I am also thankful to Dr. Himanshu for his assistance on updating the poverty lines for India. I need to specially acknowledge Mr. Varghese from whom I learnt the methodology of extracting unit record data of the National Sample Survey Organisation.

My brief professional stints with the Indian Institute of Public Administration and the National Institute of Public Finance and Policy were very satisfying not simply because of the stimulating areas of work but also because of the persons whom I worked with. I am grateful to Professor Aasha Kapur Mehta, Dr. Lekha Chakraborty and Dr. Pinaki Chakraborty who extended this cherished association beyond my professional tenure and gave me confidence by their repeated words of encouragement. I particularly thank Professor Mehta for sharing a survey questionnaire that helped me in the design of my own case study and also for her comments on an earlier draft of a chapter based on the case study. Special thanks are also due to Dr. Anit Mukherjee at the NIPFP for sharing the NSS 52nd Round data and a household survey questionnaire apart from the occasional discussions on the progress of my work. I also benefited from discussions regarding the unit record data of the NSS with Mr. Krishanu Karmakar, who was earlier at NIPFP.

I would like to acknowledge the University Grants Commission for the fellowship without which this work could not have been completed in time.

The home front has inadvertently faced the greatest neglect during this process and I sincerely hope that I have done justice to their sacrifices. I acknowledge my father, Late Samiran Chowdhury with fond remembrance as he would have been a very happy person just to see the amount of effort I have put in this work. I salute maa for the indomitable spirit and patience that she has displayed all through these years. My bhalomama deserves exclusive accolades for the special effort he has put in so that I do not lose focus of my work. I would also like to thank bhaididi and Dilip’daa not only for their concern on the status of my work from time to time but also for the responsibilities that they have shouldered all along, which honestly should have been mine. Papa, meshomoni, bhai, piku, maami, and the little ones Rai, Titli and Wridhi also have been integral parts of this larger support system without which this work could not have been completed. I would take this occasion to specially acknowledge Amar jethu whose role as a teacher and a mentor continues to have an enormous influence on my academics and general demeanour.

The unconditional company of my friends have been a constant source of relaxation and rejuvenation all throughout this journey. Protiva deserves my special acknowledgements for being the greatest companion I can think of. Her soothing presence allowed me to carry out my work without any apprehensions regarding the uncertainties of the near future. I acknowledge her assistance in entering the survey data, helping me out with the 52nd Round NSS unit level data and a comprehensive editing of an earlier version of this thesis. I would also like to specially thank Nilanjan, Saikat, Dibyendu and Kaushik for their support in terms of suggestions and references at crucial moments. Among others I would like to express my deepest gratitude for, Partha, Gokul, Arijit, Shamindra, Parama, Swapan, Rajdeep, Rajarshi, Sumita, Kallol’daa, Joyeeta, Sunando, Ayan, Debsubhra, Subrata, Sourabh, Sandeepani, Subbu, Amit, Mustafa, Shantanu, Prithviraj, Bharat, Shailendra and Subhasis’daa for their delightful company and constant encouragement.

Last but not the least I am indebted to the inhabitants of Coolie Camp and Kusumpur Pahadi for sharing their experiences with me. I hope this work can contribute in some significant manner to the betterment of their plight.

Thank you all......
