ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The academic authors are able to bring to life a study of their aspiration, as a rule, due to a certain affirmative external environment, created by personalities and institutions. I could not have written my thesis without this strongly positive in nature and extremely helpful environment. In the process of producing this scholarly work, I was privileged to enjoy the support and encouragement of several individuals. First and foremost, I would like to express my profound appreciation to Professor Shashikant Jha from SIS Centre for European Studies at JNU and highlight his most valuable academic input in the form of advice, direction and mentoring. I greatly benefited from the admirable deepness of professional knowledge and pertinent guidance of my scholarly supervisor. The combination of professionalism with his high human qualities was not solely helpful but made my work extremely enjoyable.

I am pleased to pay tribute to Jawaharlal Nehru University as to an institution of educational and academic excellence on the world scale. Affiliation with it is itself an honor for me. Centre for Russian and Central Asian Studies became close to my mind even before I engaged in the given study. My gratefulness goes also to the Chairperson of CR&CAS Professor Anuradha Chenoy.

I would like to express my gratitude to the Indian Council for Cultural Research, which granted me a scholarship, thus enabling to complete the work.

I am delighted to acknowledge the contribution of Her Excellency Reena Pandey, then Ambassador of India to Armenia and her spouse Dr. Ashok Pandey, whose continuous encouragement to carry on with the work constituted a source of inspiration.

The Reverend Dr. Vrej Nersessian, the Curator of the Christian section (Asia, Pacific and Africa collections) at the British Library in London, certainly deserves mention. His intellectual input and knowledge of historical sources helped me in addressing the broad topic of Armenian-Indian relations.

During the course of work I always relied on the support of the family. My father Vahan Baibourtian, Professor of International Relations at Yerevan State University and former Ambassador, often guided me, rendered encouragement as well as expressed strong desire to see fascinating pages of Indo-Armenian interaction being illuminated through this study. My wife Yvette and children should be thanked and praised for their patience and espousal.
