Coming from a rural background with education in Telugu medium, it was a struggle from the beginning for me at JNU. My teachers and friends have been a constant source of encouragement in overcoming all insecurities in this regard. I remember in particular the encouragement given by my teacher and guide Prof. Sahadevan throughout in overcoming the shortcomings that accompanied such a background, especially the problem of writing well in English language.

Prof. Sahadevan who helped me with the early steps in research as my Guide for the MPhil Dissertation has been involved with my PhD Thesis from its very inception. I remember with gratitude his constant involvement and the valuable insights as well as the meticulous corrections that have helped enhance qualitatively the research work. He has also extended great support and provided me with exposure to the concept of peace-building by helping me undertake a field trip to Sri Lanka for collection of data and first-hand information and increased my confidence by making me a Research Associate in a Project. I am grateful for his sense of involvement and nature of engagement with my research endeavour.

I am grateful to all my teachers in the South Asian Studies Division as well as the Centre for South, Central, South East Asian and South West Pacific Studies who have been a constant source of encouragement. I would like to express my gratitude to Arthur Monteiro for painstakingly editing the whole thesis. My friends Ratnesh and family Amitha, Sunitha, Mani, Amritashva, Manasi, Jeetu, Abdul, Ashwini, Jyotsna, Reena, Chitra, Geeta have been a great source of support and stood by me in most difficult times. I would like to appreciate the kind of cooperation extended to me by Vardani and family and Sarvesh in Sri Lanka and am thankful for their help and support during my stay in Colombo.

My family members in Wyra and Bangalore who have supported me and stood by me all the time deserves special mention. I remember with gratitude all my Comrades in the students' movement who have stood by me and have inspired me through their commitment to a cause. For someone who had never stayed away from my parents, Com. Grewal has been a source of reassurance just by being around. And I owe my heartfelt gratitude to Vijoo, for motivating me to finish my Thesis despite all difficulties and who has sacrificed a lot for my sake during the last four years.
