

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I pray to the Almighty 'Allah' for His great mercifulness and choicest blessings generously bestowed on me without which I could have never seen this work through.

Writing a doctoral dissertation involves a long and difficult journey that requires so much intellectual effort that it would be an impossible task without the significant support of many good people and institutions. I am blessed with having extraordinary research supervisors and wonderful human beings, Prof. Shamim Ahmad and Prof. Jabir Ali, who helped readily whenever I turned to them and continuously encouraged me to successfully achieve this important goal of my life. Their insight, wisdom and superior research supervision has always inspired me and nourished my intellectual maturity that I will benefit from, for a long time to come. I am honored to be guided by Professor Jabir Ali who motivate and gave me the proper direction and the freedom to bring to fruition the ideas and the concepts put forth in this dissertation. His patience, encouragement and expertise helped me grow in the research world. The lessons of professionalism, scientific research and the ability to work assiduously come from him as he leads by example.

Special mention needs to be made of the Indian Institute of Management, Lucknow for providing access to data, information, and documents consulted in the course of the study. I am also grateful of my father, uncles and family members for their unconditional support and goodwill. Special gratitude is extended to Dr. Usman sb., Dr. Sanauallah Khan sb., Dr. Abdul Mannan sb. and Dr. Obaidullah sb. for their motivations, Mr. Imran and Shahnawaz Rehman Khan for their invaluable assistance. I also wish to thank my friends Athar Noor, Motasim Ali Khan, Dr. Salman Hyder, Mr. Ahmad Massod Khan, Dr. Tribhuwan Nath, Dr. Shahid Alam for their suggestions and support.

At last, but most, I must acknowledge the staff of E-choupal, Lifeline, TKS and CSC for accepting my request to conduct the field work as well as the farmers who participated in the survey and provided their time and valuable information on which this work is based:
