ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is my joy to gratefully acknowledge the valuable contributions of people who have made it possible for me to undertake and complete this research work.

First and foremost, I gratefully acknowledge the greatness of the people, especially the Catholics of Kalghatgi taluk. Journeying with them for the last five years has been an experience of great learning in my life. I am grateful to the hospitality, cooperation and support that I received from simple men and women during my stay there and during the interviews.

I am deeply grateful to Prof. Dr. Felix Wilfred, the supervisor of this study and the Head of the Department of Christian Studies, University of Madras. Dr. Wilfred encouraged, challenged and supported me all along my search in the deep ocean of popular religiosity. He has helped me explore many treasures therein with his thoroughness, creativity, perception, insights, and all this arising from a deep concern and commitment to the poor and the marginalized in society. His insistence on looking at reality from the perspective of the poor in all our theorizing has inspired me greatly.

I am grateful to the Jesuit Conference of India, very specially the former provincial of South Asia, Fr Lisbert D’Souza, S.J., and the present Provincial of South Asia, Fr Hector D’Souza, S.J., who extended all their help and cooperation for my study.

I am immensely grateful to every member of the Jesuit community of Sacred Heart College, Satya Nilayam, who has been a constant source of encouragement, and support all through the period of my research. I thank the Jesuit community of Loyola College, Chennai, for its hospitality that I cherished at the early stages of my research.
I also thank the Provincial and Jesuits of the Karnataka Province for their constant encouragement and guidance.

I am indebted to Fr Joseph Rodrigues, the former parish priest of the Holy Rosary Church, who has been a great help and support from the very beginning of my research. His hospitality, concern and reflections on the popular religious practices at Kalghatgi have been a great source of encouragement and support in the work of my research. I gratefully remember the Jesuit community at Vidya Niketan for providing me accommodation during my visit to Dharwad and extending cooperation in my research.

I thank Prof. Dr Thomas George, former Head of the Department of Christian Studies, who encouraged me from the beginning. I also gratefully acknowledge the cheerful and encouraging appreciation of Prof. Dr Joe Mannath. I am grateful to Ms Rexy Joseph and Mr Moorthy the present, non-teaching staff members of the department, and also Ms Lilly, the former non-teaching staff for rendering cheerful service whenever needed.

The ‘study circle’ I interacted with provided me with good opportunities for learning and interaction. This was a good forum that encouraged, critiqued and goaded me to critically reflect on different issues of my research. To the ‘study circle group’–Bishop Chinnappa, Frs. Maria Arul Raja, V. Arul Raj, Maria David, G. Patrick, George Thadathil, Jose Maliekal, Anthony Sebastian, Francis Gonsalves, James Ponnaiah, Kulandai, Jerome, Joe Francis, Xavier Arul Raj, Srs. Pushpa, Shalini and Metti–my special thanks.

I would like to gratefully remember the late Prof. Dr. William Madtha, of Karnataka University, Dharwad, and Prof. Dr. S. Imrapur, of Karnataka University for their valuable time spent with me discussing and sharing on the topic and providing me an opportunity to make good use of the resources, especially the library facilities of the Karnataka University, Dharwad.

I thank the librarian and staff of Madras Institute of Development Studies, United Theological College, Bangalore, Dharmaram Vidyapeeth, Bangalore, Karnataka University Library, Dharwad, Sacred Hear college, Satya Nilayam and Sacred Heart Seminary, Poonamalee for allowing me to make use of their priceless books during my research.

I thank Dr G. Patrick who showed special interest in my work, and took care to read through the thesis with a critical focus that helped me. I thank James Ponnaiah, Francis Gonsalves, Augustine Perumalil and Saju George for going through the manuscript and suggesting appropriate corrections for the thesis.

The valuable contributions of all those mentioned above and several others, all of whom I have not mentioned names in detail, have made it possible for me to arrive successfully at this moment of completion of the work. I remain grateful to each and every one of them.
