Acknowledgement

Five years is a long period of life, many events take place, many moments come and go and many faces become dear. The memory of human being is also short lived. At first, I would like to apologize to all those inspirational and motivational persons, whom I am unable to count at this moment. I believe that behind any human agency, there is always the contribution of society, and I must be grateful to the circumstances and situations which provided me this opportunity.

At the very outset, I extend my heartfelt gratitude to the University Grants Commission for offering me Junior Research Fellowship to carry out this work.

I express my deepest sense of gratitude and profound indebtedness to my guide, Dr. R.B. Bhagat, Professor and Head, Department of Migration and Urban Studies, International Institute for Population Studies, Mumbai for his constant guidance and support. His concern, constant encouragement, deep understanding of the subject and especially his empathetic treatment has kept me on track and was the greatest source of motivation for me. I really consider myself blessed to have him as my guide.

I am very thankful to the institute for giving me the opportunity to carry out this work. I am also thankful to my thesis advisory committee members Dr. H. Lhungdim, Professor, Department of Public Health and Mortality, IIPS and also Dr. S. K. Mohanty, Professor, Department of Fertility Studies, IIPS for their support and valuable suggestions. I am also very thankful to the hostel administration staff for their kind consideration and cooperation, who offered me to stay in the hostel till my thesis got completed. I would also like to mention about the Academic Section staff, Library staff and Data Centre staff, without the assistance of whom, I would not have reached the desired goal. I am especially thankful to Professor Sayeed Unisa, Department of Mathematical Demography and Statistics and also the current Ph.D.
Coordinator, for her goodwill and concern towards all students and providing the necessary resources I needed. I am also deeply indebted to Professor Ashwini Kumar, Department of Development Studies, Tata Institute of Social Sciences for his constant motivations and thoughtful discussions with me from time to time.

I would also like to express my sincerest gratitude to my closest friend Ms. Tanusree Dutta, M.Phil., IIPS for her support and encouragement at various times, especially at tough moments I faced a few times at the last stage of my work.

I received immense help and cooperation and also a homely environment during my field work for which I would like to thank Mr. Shams Alam, Mr. Noor Alam, Mr. Shafik Alam, Mr. Mustak and Mr. Firoz, whom I met during my field work and who became my lifelong friends.

From my seniors I would like to extend my gratitude to Dr. Atanu Ghosh, Assistant Professor, Bankura Christian College and Dr. R. Lusume, Assistant Professor, Pondicherry University. At this moment I would like to recall Mr. Applo Pou, my ex-roommate and closest friend during the four years of my Ph.D. life and who supported me morally for a long time.

I am also grateful to all the respondents of my study in the surveyed area of Barauli Block, Gopalganj District, Bihar for their hospitable behavior and cooperations.

Finally, I would like to extend my gratitude to my late grandmother, Mrs. Satmaya Devi, for her empathy and encouragement since my childhood days, my father Sri Nityanand Singh, my loving mother Smt. Indu Devi, my elder brother Mr. Chandan Kumar, my loving sister-in-law, Mrs. Niharika Singh, and my inspirational uncle Mr. Rampravesh Kumar and also all other relatives and well-wishers.
