ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I express my sincere gratitude to Dr. Arpita Ghose (Dhar), Associate Professor, Dept. of Economics, Jadavpur University and Prof. Bishwanath Bhattacharya, Professor (retired), Population Studies Unit, Indian Statistical Institute for their constant guidance and support during the entire period of the study. Their unremitting advices, affection and help are immensely responsible for success of this study.

I am obligated to Dr. Prasanta Pathak, Head of Population Studies Unit, Indian Statistical Institute for his valuable suggestions, comments and constructive criticisms time to time. It is due to his meticulous editing that the entire study could be completed in present form.

I am indebted to Jadavpur University (Dept. of Economics) and Indian Statistical Institute for kindly permitting me to carry out this work and for providing necessary facilities to complete the work.

I am also thankful to my departmental colleagues Dr. Pranati Dutta, Ms. Swati Sadhu, Ms. Swagata Gupta and Mr. Subhash Barman for their heartiest encouragements. Thanks are extended to Ms. Gita Ghosh, Ms. Maya Ghosh, Mr. Saroj Chakrabarty, Mr. Ashok Singh and Mr. Debabrata Modak for their help and co-operation in every aspect of my work.

I am mostly grateful to my father, late Madhu Sudhan De and father-in-law, late Sibabrata Mukherjee. Their inspiration, unconditional love and support helped me to concentrate on this study.

The author also expresses his special thanks to Mr. Prasanta Mukherjee, Ms. Mahua Ghosh and Ms. Debika Mukherjee for their constant support and inspiration to continue the study.

Special mention should be made of my good friends Dr. Sandip Mitra and Mr. Deb kumar Som whose inspiration and help I can never forget. Last but not least I should give thanks to my wife Ms. Kankana De and my beloved daughter Ms. Pritha De for their encouragement, co-operation and support at all levels to carry out this work.
