Acknowledgement

The list of all those who supported and contributed to my work could never be exhaustive. There have been innumerable people who have provided direction and motivation to the work in significant ways, which, otherwise could never be possible.

First of all, I am extremely grateful to my supervisors, Prof. G.J.V. Prasad and Prof. Neeladri Bhattacharya for giving me the liberty of choice and thought. I also thank them for being patient with my slow pace of research and for providing constant encouragement for the work. I thank Prof. Shirshendu Chakrabarty for finding time despite his busy schedule, to provide keen and valuable insights into the research.

I also thank Dr. Jane Cunningham of Courtauld Institute of Art and Dr. Jim Fowler of Victoria and Albert Museum for letting me access their valuable archives and taking extraordinary interest in my work. I also thank Dr. Emma Lauze and Dr. Martin Postle of The Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art for helping me locate archival materials and polishing my ways of interpreting them.

I shall remain forever indebted to King's College, London for providing me with a most timely opportunity and funding to visit London through an exchange programme. My heartfelt thanks to Dr. Ruvani Ranasinha and Dr. Jon Wilson for arranging this and for taking pains for making my stay in London most productive and fruitful.

I am sincerely thankful to various libraries both in India and London for maintaining well organized knowledge resources and for making them conducive for research. I hereby also take the opportunity to thank the staff of the British Library, the Department of Prints and Drawings, the British Museum, Victoria and Albert Museum holdings at Blythe House, Olympia, the Courtauld Institute Library, the Paul Mellon Centre Library and the Maugham Library in London, the Lalit Kala Akademi Library and the Teen Murti Museum and Library, New Delhi, and the National Library, Kolkata.

It has been many seasons of hardwork and I thank all those who have stood by me at times of distress and need. I express my sincere gratitude to all my friends abroad who provided immense boost to my research by supplying me with material unavailable in India.
I am also grateful to Shaheed Bhagat Singh College and the University of Delhi for relieving me from my duties unto them for a period which enabled me to write my dissertation with considerable ease. I also thank the fraternity of Shaheed Bhagat Singh College who has become my family in an increasingly alienating city.

Maa and Baba have been a source of unwavering support and inspiration and had it not been for them, I would not have ventured thus far. This is an opportunity also to express my heartfelt gratitude and regards for the person who has always been taken for granted: Arjun has been my springwell for intellectual sustainance ever since I know him. His unstinted faith in my capabilities, even at moments when I lacked in it myself, has been my source of confidence and conviction.
