ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Acknowledging people and institutions who have helped you so much through five years of a Ph.D is a particularly daunting task; there are so many to thank and there is always the chance that one might forget someone’s name. So, I would first of all like to express my sincere apologies to anyone whose name has been inadvertently left out.

I need to first thank my supervisor, Professor Christopher S. Raj, for his patience and kindness and for always motivating me. His erudition and interest in American politics and foreign policy have helped me immensely in improving the quality of this work. I have learnt a lot from him and am truly blessed to have had the opportunity to work under his supervision. I also thank this great University which taught me as much about life as about research. I also thank all my teachers in JNU for everything. Professor P.R. Kumaraswamy deserves special mention for encouraging me at every step, cheering me up and always giving me time. My teachers at the centre, Professor Chintamani Mahapatra and Professor K.P. Vijayalakshmi taught me the rudiments of American foreign policy and domestic politics. I thank Professor Christopher Barrett of Cornell University and USDA officials for always quickly responding to my emails and sending me whatever information I required. I also thank my school teachers and teachers in college who gave me the courage the face the world. Thanks also to Neelam Madam and Rajbirji were helpful throughout my seven years in the centre.

Many institutes and libraries helped me complete this work in time. I would like to thank the staff of the American Information Resource Centre, JNU library, ICSR library, Exim Bank library, Teenmurthi library, ICWA library, USI library and IODA library. My former employers at the USI and SAGE Publications generously allowed me to work on my Ph.D and provided me much-needed financial support. Many thanks to the UGC for giving me a fellowship so I could concentrate solely on my Ph.D.

Next in line are my beautiful parents, especially amma, who have allowed me to live life on my terms and for their unquestioning faith and love for me. Thank you, amma and achan! I also need to thank my brother, who has taken up so many responsibilities at such a young age, for his absolute devotion and love for me, believing in me and for fighting for me so many times. My husband, Vinay, deserves my gratitude for putting up with my tantrums, reading my chapters and doing all the technical things that needed to be done before this thesis could be bound. My pets, Jacky and Julie, who always cheered me up and made my brief stays at home so joyful warrant special mention. Now, if only they could read! I also thank my husband’s family for their support.

Last, but not the least, to use a cliché, I thank my friends in JNU, who gave me such a whale of a time here: Poornima chechi and Kishore for their support and helping me out with statistics as also for suggesting this topic; Oommen for his Oommenisms and for sharing insights from his work at the Supreme Court Commissioners’ Office on the Right to Food; Arvind for reading my chapters; Karmegam and Anish for providing wholesome entertainment every evening; Krishnan for being Krishna; Burton chettan who has always helped me; Kowsy chettan and Pramod who guided me through my early years in JNU; Sunita chechi and Dineshji for helping out when I was most in need; and other friends like Suja, Hari, Ajish, Ravi, Titto, Shakkir, Geethika, Arun, Karthik.
Neha, Arpan, Martin, Sobinchettai, Guna, Ruchi, Saji, Alooji, Jojin, Namitha, Nidhi, Stuti, Sarani, Shefalska, Ratheesh Babu, Samkutty, Honey, Jaffar, Leela chechi and family, Vinodettan, Joshy chettan and Priyadarshini for being with me through good times and bad. I express my gratitude to all the rest of my mallu brethren for all their little acts of kindness. I owe you all! Thanks are also due to my friends’ parents—the Kohlis and Banerjees—who gave me home-made food whenever I felt homesick.

Finally, I alone am responsible for the views expressed in this work, and for any errors and shortcomings therein.
