Bharatiya Janata Party plays a relevant role in Indian politics since 1989 as the main opposition party in parliament but today it is the ruling party with having not absolute but achieving the highest number of votes in parliament. It is the only party which did not come out of Congress stock and whose policies and approach on most of the issues facing the country were totally different from the congress was Bharatiya Jana Sangh between 1951 to 1977 and is Bharatiya Janata Party from 1980, April onwards. This party came out of RSS stock. Except its founder President Dr. Shyama Prasad Mukerjee, who could provide leadership only for two years, all others who provided leadership those days were novices in Indian politics. It is through the process of self learning, the leaders and the party they led, grew in acquiring a stature in politics. The uniqueness of the party has all along been, to be a party which always had to swim against the current. Its leadership, its cadres, its ideology, its approach, its dedication and renunciation for the cause of the country have enabled the party to occupy a prime position in Indian Politics today. It is a number one party both inside and outside parliament and is now heading a coalition government. All along the political current was against it and today all parties who oppose BJP find themselves swimming against the current, as current changed its course and now has gone in favour of BJP.
