Acknowledgement

First and foremost is the debt I owe to my guide Prof. Tiplot Nongbri, who despite of all her unfortunate ill health took so much care and pain to help me complete this thesis. The encouragement and inspirations I received from her are so immense that my sense of gratitude cannot be described in words. I valued the discussions I have with her and the constant support that she has rendered to me throughout this research.

Among others, I would like to specially thank Prof. Anand Kumar, Chairperson, Centre for the Study of Social Systems, School of Social Sciences. Even though, he is occupied and busy with all his prior appointments, he spares time to go through the draft and made some valuable inputs and correction, which I can never forget.

I am indebted to Prof. Avijit Pathak for his ever-ready willingness and eagerness to help whenever I approach him. More than anything, in spite of his tight schedule, he gave his precious time to go through the draft. I have a memorable interaction with him and he made certain commendable intellectual inputs.

I would be rudely unfair on my part not to mention my co-guide, Prof. Ehsanul Haq who is always available whenever I need him. His intellectual inputs and suggestions on my work are precious and intense. I shall not forget the amount of discussion I had with him. I also expressed my sincere thanks to all other faculty members for their help and support in various ways both intellectually and through encouragement.

I take this opportunity to thank to all the staff and members of JNU Library; DSA Library; Centre for the Study of Social Systems; Nehru Memorial Museum and Library; Ratan Tata Library, Department of Sociology, Delhi University; National Documentation Centre, Indian Council of Social Science Research; National Archives, New Delhi, for allowed me to use the facilities.

I cannot but thank the Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR), New Delhi, for the doctoral fellowship, which partially met the financial requirement for the completion of the thesis.

I also would like to acknowledge many of my friends who helped me in various ways for making the thesis to see the light of the day. Without their encouragement, support and help, it is hard to think that the thesis would become a reality. Among others, specially, I would like to mention Shantanu, Apu (Hriipuni), Aphan, Kailhrii, Poji, Dikho, Tasongwi, Adani, Tennyson, Wilson and Joseph.

My special thanks also go to all the respondents, concerned village elders, headmasters/principals of the schools/colleges, mission workers/church leaders, social workers for their cooperation and frank response in all through my fieldwork. Besides I expressed my heartfelt gratitude to all who host me in different villages during the course of my field study.

At this time, I also take this opportunity to express my sincere thank to all my beloved brothers and sisters for their constant emotional and moral support. Had it not being for their untiring prayer support and encouragement, I would never have been able to complete this thesis. My beloved Mom and Dad, from whom I derive the real inspiration and determination in my endeavour deserve my greatest gratitude for all the many sufferings that they had to undergo in order to support me. Above all, I thank the Almighty for all the mercies and blessings that He bestowed on me all through my research work.
