ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am in particular very much indebted to my guide Dr. Damodar Biswal, Reader, P.G. Department of Commerce, S.C.S. College, Puri, for his able guidance, valuable counsel and help at all stages of this work. His personal care, interest and encouragement have contributed greatly to the success and completion of this work.

My greatful thanks are due to my teacher Prof. Dr. G.P. Acharya, P.G. Department of Commerce, Ravenshaw College, Cuttack, for his ungrudging help and guidance at all points of time. Had it not been for his stellar co-operation, this thesis would have never seen the light of the day.

I express my deep gratitude to Prof. Dr. R.K. Jena, Prof. B.K. Pattnaik, Prof. Dr. P.C. Tripathy, Dr. R.K. Bal, Reader and other members of the P.G. Department of Commerce, Utkal University, Prof. B.B. Acharya, Head of the Department of Commerce, Ravenshaw College, Cuttack, for their wise counselling at different critical points of my research work.

My thanks are also due to my friends Mr. D. Nayak, Mr. S.C. Sahoo and Mr. A. Bharati for their help, assistance and encouragement at all points of time.

I also acknowledge with gratitude the services rendered by the various institutional agencies like the Lead Bank Office,
Dhenkanal, District Statistical Office, Dhenkanal, DRDA and CADA office, Dhenkanal, United Commercial Bank, Zonal Office, Bhubaneswar, Bureau of Statistics and Economics, Bhubaneswar, National Institute of Rural Development, Hyderabad, etc. I am also thankful to those officers of Commercial banks and Promotional agencies who immensely helped me in my Field study extending their excellent and exemplary co-operation.

Last but not the least, my wife Jyoshnamayee and children Durga and Devi also deserve special mention here for their extraordinary sense of sacrifice in making me completely free from all domestic problems during the entire span of my research work.

I also acknowledge the prompt and efficient typing work done by Mr. Manoj Kumar Maharana, despite his busy schedule.

I take this opportunity to thank them all.
