After much consideration the subject for this project was selected in consultation with my guide Dr. M.Q. Khan who has done a good deal of work in this field. Grateful acknowledgement must be recorded here of his sincere and patient guidance, valuable suggestions, clear instructions and careful corrections which he made from time to time. The manuscript has been written three times and each re-writing has been scrutinized with a view to making the thesis as flawless as possible. But for his encouragement and sincere interest the work would have perhaps taken much more time and remained incomplete owing to various impediments and difficulties which the writer had to face while working on this subject.

A great deal of difficulties had to be solved owing to the non-availability of relevant materials which could not be found from one place. As such, intensive work had to be undertaken in the library of the Self Education Trust, Cuttack.
Some very important materials were also obtained from the Adyar Library and Research Centre, Madras. The writer is deeply indebted to the authorities of all these libraries for providing help and working facilities for months together in their institutions. Mention must also be made here of the authorities of Trinity College Library, Dublin, for the help and cooperation they extended by sending some of the rare and relevant matters.

Finally, the writer wishes to record her sincere sense of gratitude to all those who have encouraged her and also extended all kinds of help and cooperation for the completion of the thesis.
