ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

A work of this kind is seldom the result of one person’s effort. It involves numerous individuals and institutions, and this is no exception.

This work originated under the scholarly guidance of my teacher Professor Prasant K Saboo, Professor of Finance, Department of Business Administration, Utkal University, Bhubaneswar. His cooperation and encouragement to help me tackle the pressure of this study along with my course curriculum at Indian Institute of Management Calcutta, Kolkata, has been most noteworthy. I am dedicated to him for the pains he took in going through every line and word I wrote, and also for his valuable suggestions and advice for modifications and improvements in all moments during the period of this study. His role as a teacher, guide and philosopher will always remain a source of inspiration to me throughout my life. No words can express my deep sense of gratitude to SIR who has helped me in each step starting from the selection of the topic till the last stage.

I acknowledge my sincere thanks to all my teachers at the Department of Business Administration, Utkal University, who have taught me the basics of Management, which has helped me immensely during each moment of this study.

I am also thankful to my teachers at IIM Calcutta who have encouraged me to carry on the current research along with my course requirements at the institute.

I am extremely grateful to all the staff of the Department of Personnel & Administration of Paradeep Phosphates Limited without whose cooperation, this work would not have been complete. My special gratitude to Mr. Pujari, the General Manager, P&A, PPL, for all his support and cooperation.
I also thank all the respondents at PPL for their active cooperation at the time of data collection.

I have drawn heavily on the library services of B.C. Roy Library at IIM Calcutta and National Library, Calcutta. I am thankful to all the librarians who were always helpful.

My deep sense of appreciation is due to Mr. B.L.Rao and Mr. I.D.Majhi for their sincere cooperation at all times whenever need be.

I also thank Acharya Associates, Bhubaneswar for helping me with Statistical Tools.

My deep feelings of appreciation for all my family members, especially my wife and friend Ms. Roopa Mishra, and also my in-laws who have been with me throughout and have helped me accomplish this humble task.
