ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am deeply indebted to my supervisor, Professor Prabhat Patnaik, for guiding me through a long and fruitful journey that has resulted in this Ph.D thesis. The opportunity to work with him has given me some important insights into the methodology of theoretical and empirical analysis. During the course of my research, he has shared with me his deep understanding of the macro-dynamics of developing economies. Above all, I have learnt from him the importance of a philosophical underpinning that must provide the basis for any research in economics.

I am extremely grateful to Professor Abhijit Sen and Dr. Jayati Ghosh for giving me valuable comments on parts of my thesis that I presented at the Second Annual DSA Conference on Economic Theory and Policy, Centre for Economic Studies & Planning, JNU, in 1998.

I owe a special gratitude to Dr. Hiranyya Mukhopadhyay and Subrata Guha for going through parts of my research and giving me some important suggestions.

I am thankful to Dr. Sarmila Banerji and Dr. Amit Shovan Ray for providing me with some suggestions for my empirical analysis.
A special thanks goes to Rajaji, Bhistji and Bachhe Singhji for being extremely helpful, in their official as well as personal capacity, throughout this period.

I am grateful to all my friends including Uday, Indra, Mousumi, Ananya, Soumya, Soumen, Mukherjee, Chanchal, Haju, Partha, Chotto, Somsankar, Biswajit, Prithwis, Raghu and Shaon for providing intellectual stimulation as well as emotional support. My friends in Sabarmati Hostel also deserve a special mention for all the happy moments that I shared with them.

Finally, I would like to express my love and appreciation for my family: for my father, who has taught me the value of hard work, my mother, whose unflinching support has helped me carry on in good and bad times, my brother, whose confidence in my abilities gives me great strength, and Shaon, who came into my life and made all this possible.

Any mistakes in this thesis are mine alone.
