ACKNOWLEDGMENT

A hope that an intensive study on LABOUR IN THE SPINNING MILLS OF ORISSA will be found useful for the reconstruction of an integrated account of Orissan industries in these exciting days of sweeping modernisation, rapid industrialisation and breath-taking technological breakthrough, and lead to further studies in the field inspired me to take the topic. For preparation of the thesis I have used digital numbering system for numbering the chapters, their sections and sub-sections. Each chapter, section and subsection has been given explanatory titles and subtitles. The content therefore presents not only the sequence of the study but also its inner logic.

I am indebted to my teacher and supervisor Prof (Dr) G C Kar, presently Director, Nabakrishna Choudhury Centre For Development Studies, Bhubaneswar under whose able and inspiring guidance this thesis has been prepared.

I am grateful to Prof B P Dash and Dr B K Mohanty of the PG Department of Economics, Ravenshaw College, and Dr T K Chakravarty, former Reader in English for their encouragement and help. I also thank Dr H C Panda, Dr P C Mahapatra, Dr P P Patra, Sri C R Mohanty for their assistance. My gratitude extends to the library staff of the I C S S R, Tata Institute of Social Science and Ambedkar Institute, all in Mumbai, National Library, Calcutta and Utkal University Library, Bhubaneswar as well as the authorities and staff of Orissa State Archive, Bureau of Statistics and Economics, SPINFED, I D C, Directorate of Textile and Office of the Labour Commissioner of Orissa, Bhubaneswar for their co-operation and help during my days of data collection.
