I would like to express my profound gratitude to my supervisor Dr. Kanti Bajpai from whom I have benefited enormously. I am also indebted to Dr. Amitabha Mattoo for his constant advice and encouragement.

During the course of my study, a large number of people helped me by providing insights and perspectives. Foremost among them is Ambassador Arundhati Ghose, India's principal negotiator at the Geneva Conference on Disarmament. I would also thank Ajit Kumar, presently Joint Secretary at the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India, and Venkatesh Verma, India's Disarmament Consular at the Permanent Mission of India at Geneva. Interview with J.N. Dixit, India's former Foreign Secretary provided crucial inputs to the study. Chloette Hernandez, Assistant to the Secretary General, Conference on Disarmament, facilitated my access to the Plenary meetings at the Conference on Disarmament. I am also appreciative of the help provided by Christopher Carle, Deputy Director, United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research at Geneva.

I am thankful to Rebecca Johnson and The Acronym Institute for providing me materials related to the 1994-96 CTBT negotiations. Interviews conducted with the Officials at the Department of State, Washington D.C. enhanced my understanding of the US perception on the Treaty negotiations. I would thank Christopher Paine, at the Natural Resources Defence Council.
(NRDC) and Steve Fetter at the University of Maryland for providing technical insights into the issue.

I have greatly benefitted from the large number of individuals whom I spoke to during my visit to the Science and World Affairs Symposium at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Summer Workshops at the Regional Centre for Strategic Studies, Colombo.

I would thank the members and the staff at the United Nations Library, Geneva, US Library of Congress, Jawaharlal Nehru University Library and the Library at the Institute for Defence and Analyses, New Delhi.

My family has always been a source of encouragement for me. My friends M. Siddharth, Sanjay Jha and Nitin Srivastava helped me while writing my thesis. I would like to acknowledge a special indebtedness to my friend Rahul who always came to my rescue when my spirits were lagging. Lastly, I thank Mr. Rajender who did the strenuous job to typing. The responsibility of demerits is mine alone.

New Delhi
July 2000

MANISH