ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

When I embarked on the odyssey of a research work on Russian political institutions, I could not foresee that I would land myself in a deep sea with troubled water and the journey would not be a smooth sailing affair. However, it was due to the magnanimity of Prof. Shashikant Jha, my esteemed supervisor, I could sail smoothly to reach the destination. Prof. Jha has been an exemplary guide and a teacher par excellence. His deep knowledge, rich talent and wide experience have been a tower of strength for me. Working under him has been thoroughly enlightening, rewarding and pleasant experience. At a personal level, I have drawn a great deal of strength from his affection and concern during the years of intellectual pursuit. I had the unique privilege to foray into his rich personal collections on Soviet, post-Soviet political system and history, which greatly facilitated my research work. His contributions are unfathomable and unmeasurable. Gratitude is too small a word to repay my indebtedness to him.

The role of other faculty members of the centre is no less important. Although they were not associated directly with the present work, they have given me inspiration, advice, moral and emotional support. I am very much grateful to them.

It is undenying a fact that a field-cum study grant, awarded to me at the right stage of my work, by the Field-Trip Committee of the School of International Studies emboldened me to a great extent and facilitated my dream project come to reality. It enabled me to visit various libraries and universities in the United Kingdom. I express my heart-felt thanks to the members of the committee for being considerate towards me.

In course of my field trip to UK, I was privileged to have access to the British Library, School of Slavonic and East European Studies (SSEES) Library, the Alexander Bakov Library of Birmingham University, Libraries of London School of Economics and Political Science, Manchester University and Glasgow University. My special thanks, therefore, goes to the authorities of these libraries for their kind and generous help.

During the field trip I was fortunate to interact with eminent scholars and authorities on Russian Area Studies like Prof. R.W. Davies, Prof. Julian Cooper, Prof. Stephen White, Prof. Richard Sakwa, Prof. Yoram Gorlizski and others. It was Prof. Richard Sakwa of Kent University who was instrumental in bestowing upon me an enviable opportunity of attending a seminar on “Regional Transformations in the Russian Federation”, held under the auspices of Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) at the London School of Economics and Political Science, UK. Kataryna Wolcroz of Birmingham University who was handling a similar kind of project on Ukrainian political institutions gave her valuable time for a general discussion on the topic. These opportunities enlightened me, broadened my horizon and showed incandescent light on the field study. I express my deep debt of gratitude to all of them. I am choked with emotion when I recollect the generosity of Prof. Stephen White of Glasgow University and Edwin Bacon of Birmingham University who gisted their own personal copies of rare books. I convey my thanks to Dr. June Drummond of Glasgow University and Graham Dix of Birmingham University at whose instances I could have access to rich material and rare pamphlets treasured in those universities.

I can not really forget the love and affection showered on me by Mr. Dudley Thomas and his family members, Dr. Girish Chandra and the members of his family, Fergus, Jane, Ann, Deborah and, above all, my bosom friend Lopamudra. During my stay abroad, they were the angels who looked after my stay and comfort. Their kindness and hospitality has carved a niche in my heart and has left an indelible impression. The bond is so great that gratitude is too small a word for a quid-pro-quo. I can only cherish the fond memories of my association with them albeit it might be for a short period.

I am also thankful to Archana my co-researcher and companion during my field trip abroad. Together we shared moments of joy and sorrow, excitement and ecstasy, amusement and amazement. It is said a friend in need is a friend indeed. Truely she has proved herself to be a real friend.

Far from home for a long period, I had to anchor on the emotional support of Sailaja, Swati, Chaveewan, Meenu, Reena, Suresh, Rupesh, Atulya Bhaiya, Promod, Sunil, Vinayak, Ramakant and others. It is a beautiful feeling to remember their contribution. They have helped me with all their support, encouragement, advice, example and solace. Millions and millions of thanks to all of them.
The sacrifice of my family members is matchless. They have endured my long absence from home and have borne with many an anxious moment. To me, they have really been an enduring source of comfort and inspiration. I cannot repay their contribution and hence remain indebted to them forever. In particular, the assistance of my dear younger brother Jitu is commendable. Also, I can never forget those loving words through e-mail from my elder sister Niharika whose constant touch and contact cheer me up in my tension-filled moments.

I am equally grateful to Dr. B.N. Thakur and Dr. Bhaswati Sarkar for their unremitting help and encouragement in my endeavour. It is Dr. Thakur who took all the pains of translating few of the important texts from Russian language to English. I also wish to express appreciation for the sincerity shown by Ms. Neelima Singh of CRS in translating and transliterating some of the Russian texts for me.

The grant of ICSSR Regular Doctoral Fellowship came to me as a boost just at the time of need. It saved me from a situation of high and dry and facilitated to accomplish the task on time. I take this opportunity to convey my special thanks to the authorities concerned for their kindness.

Closer home, I must record my deep appreciation and heart-felt obligations to the staff of the JNU library, Russian Science and Culture, IDSA library etc. who have unhesitatingly assisted me by making available all the relevant material needed for my study.

I sincerely acknowledge the co-operation from A.P Computers particularly Ashok Kumar Chaudhary for typing some of the exceptionally lengthy chapters with utmost patience and bringing the work to its present shape.

Last but not the least, I can not really forget the unstinting help and co-operation rendered by the centre office staff, SIS office staff, hostel wardens and hostel staff of my alma mater JNU – where I spent the best years of my life. Being away from home, I always felt at home at the extremely healthy, democratic and friendly academic ambience of this great citadel of learning and I would cherish these fond memories forever.

At the end of the project I really feel nostalgic and my emotions can find a better expression in Gulzar's words,

"Haath chhute bhee toh
riste naahi choda karte
waqt ki shaakh se lamhe
naahi toda karte"
