ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to acknowledge that prayers work and miracles happen.

I would also like to thank

Prof. Mukta Prahlad – it wasn’t just hypertext reading that you taught me. Thank you for guiding me in all aspects.

Prof. Maya Pandit, for being a friend, boss, guide, support-system, punching bag... Thanks for everything.

Prof. Geetha Durairaj and Dr. Sruti Sircar for parting the sea of data and showing me the way.

Prof. V.V. Hara Gopal, Dept. of Statistics, Osmania University for help with the statistical analysis.

Prof. S.R. Prahalad, for your constant prayers and infinite encouragement. See, the chants work miracles!

Prof. Donald Leu, Prof. Coiro, and Dr. Castek of the New Literacies Research Lab at the University of Connecticut, and Zhang from cognition and technology for all the papers and information you shared. Thank you for your interest in my research.

Ranakanth, ten years have gone by since I last said this, but I can still say only the same thing: thank you for being what you are for me and for making me realize how important I am for you.

Gita, Sabina, Shubha – remembering how it started.

The subjects for coping so well with the madness of the design of my data collection sessions, the Vice Chancellor, EFL-U for the opportunity to accomplish this study, Mr. ASVNB Sankaram for the format assistance, and the staff of Dean’s office and Library for their co-operation.

Attamma and Mamaigya for the care you showed and sacrifices you made to make me complete this thesis. This is as much for you too.

In all that I do, I always keep getting back to ‘reader autonomy’, a topic very close to my heart. Thank you Dr. Ramadevi for introducing me to this area. I would like to dedicate this work to you too.

My parents, Deechi, Thoma, Varshapi and Anapi, along with their families for your encouragement, love and support. I hope this does not put an end to all the pampering I got.

Parashu and Siddhu for waiting so patiently for “amma’s PD” to finish. Here is relief.