Acknowledgements

I am grateful to my supervisor, Dr. Himanshu Prabha Ray for her encouragement, invaluable guidance and advice throughout my period of research when this thesis took shape. This work could not have been formulated in a profound structure, nor could it reach this stage without the influence of innovative ideas and perceptive criticism she perenially provided. I also express my deepest gratitude to Professor R. A. L. H. Gunawardana, former Vice Chancellor of Peradeniya University, and Professor P. V. B. Karunathilaka, Head, Department of History, University of Peradeniya, Sri Lanka, for their insightful guidance, advice and most helpful suggestions in my academic life. I am grateful to the faculty and the staff of the Centre for Historical Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, for their kind assistance and co-operation.

I owe my sincere thanks to the Indian Council for Cultural Relation (ICCR), New Delhi for providing me with financial assistance under the Commonwealth scholarship programme for the period 1998-2001 and to the authorities of Peradeniya University, Sri Lanka, who granted me study leave for a period of three years.

I am extremely grateful to the staff of the libraries, Jawaharlal Nehru University, the Centre for Historical Studies, JNU, the Archaeological Survey of India (ASI), New Delhi, the National Museum, Indian Council for Historical Research, (ICHR),New Delhi, University of Delhi, Peradeniya University, Sri Lanka, for helping me in various ways with rare books and reports.

My most sincere thanks are to the Director-general of Archaeology Survey of India (ASI) and officers of archaeological sites at Sarnath, Bodhgaya, Sravasti, Sanchi, Amaravati, Nagarjunakonda (India), Lumbini (Nepal), Anuradhapura (Sri Lanka) as well as the chief monks of monasteries, at Delhi, Sarnath, Bodhgaya, Sravasti, Sanchi (India), Lumbini Kathmandu (Nepal) and Anuradhapura (Sri Lanka) for their kind co-operation and solidarity.

I owe special gratitude to my friend Pachanan Bhoi, who has immensely helped me complete my research work. My thanks are also to my other friends, Dr. Makadawara Ananda, R. M. Ranaweera, M. A. Chandrabose, K. Karunathilake, Rajeewa Jayasinghe, Trilok Narayan, Prabhu Bhapu, Deepak, for their contribution. I must thank my disciples, the Reverend Ettamalliyagoda Ratanasara, the Reverend Malgammana Anomadassi and the Reverend Malgammana Sarananda for their keen interest and initiative in my academic activities. Without their kind and noble assistance, I would not have become so totally involved or committed to this field, which made this work see the light of the day.
