CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION
(pp.1-3)

1. Salvation, or the search for inner freedom
   1.1 Indian monasteries: spaces for freedom
   12 The place of the monasteries in the context of the Kali Yuga

2. Emergence of Brahmanical monasteries
   2.1 From the Upaniṣadic period to the rise of the Buddhist and the Jaina movements
   2.2 The Guptas and the Brahmanical renaissance
   2.3 Asceticism and its new practitioners: the Tantrics, Śāktas, Yogīs, Svāmīs and the esoteric schools
   2.4 Early medieval Brahmanical monasteries as centres of social activities

NOTES

CHAPTER I: RENUNCIATORY VALUES, ASCETICISM AND MONASTIC ORDERS: THE EARLY BACKGROUND
(pp.1-60)

I.1 Asceticism and non-attachment
I.2 Asceticism in the context of Brahmanical tradition
I.3 Institutionalization of ascetic life: the Buddhist and Jaina experience

CHAPTER II: THE IDEOLOGICAL AND INSTITUTIONAL BACKGROUND-I, EARLY PHASE OF THE EVOLUTION OF BRAHMANICAL MONASTIC INSTITUTIONS
(pp.61-152)

II.1 The Gupta period, general features and the development of Brahmanism
   II.1.1 Pre-Gupta times: the imperial interregnum
   II.1.2 The Gupta empire, new times and new styles
   II.1.3 The Gupta kings and sacred kingship
   II.1.4 The administrative system of the Guptas and the beginning of decentralized state: the role of religious institutions in such distribution of power

II.2 The historical transformation: The post-Gupta period
II.3 Categories of grants to Brāhmaṇas
II.4 The institution of the Matha: A brief sketch of linguistic and organizational evolution

NOTES

APPENDIX-A
CHAPTER III: THE IDEOLOGICAL AND INSTITUTIONAL BACKGROUND-II: KINGSHIP AND RELIGION IN EARLY MEDIEVAL NORTH INDIA (pp. 160-290)

III.1 Some major early medieval dynasties of north India, their religious affiliation and patronage

III.1.1 Harṣa
III.1.2 The Pratihāras
III.1.3 The Pālas
III.1.4 The Sānas
III.1.5 The Candraśas
III.1.6 The Gaṅgas
III.1.7 The Candēlas
III.1.8 The Kalacūrīs or Haihayas of Tripūrī, Ratnapura and Sarayūpāra
III.1.9 The Paramāras
III.1.10 The Cāhamānas or Cauhans
III.1.11 The Guhilas of Mewar and Dhom
III.1.12 Other Royal families of that time (in a sketch)

i.) Maitrakas of Valabhi i.) Vākāṭakas ii.) Śaindothavas of Kāngoda and Śrīvardhana i.) Maukhāris of Kōṣala v.) Kākairas of Bāσtar v.) Suṅkis of Kōdālōka vi.) Bhaumakaras vii.) Bhaṇjas of Khiṇjāli i.) Bhaṇjas of Baudh ii.) Bhaṇjas, later, of Khiṇjāli vii.) Bhaṇjas of Mayūrbhanj xii.) Gaṅgas of Kaliṅga xiii.) Gaṅgas of Śvētaka xiv.) Gaṅgas, later, of Kaliṅga xv.) Caulukyās of Mātamaṇḍūra and Āṇahilapāṭakā xvi.) Saindhavas or Jayadrātas xvii.) Yāḍavas xviii.) Śilāhāras of Kōṅkaṇ

III.2 Early medieval kingship and Brahmanical asceticism

III.2.1 Ancient kingship/early medieval kingship, the evolution and the influence from the esoteric thought

III.2.2 The magic powers and the perfect kingdom

III.2.3 Cult centres/royal cult centres: Puri, a classical case of holistical kingship

NOTES
CHAPTER IV: DOCTRINES, SECTS AND MONASTIC ORGANIZATION (pp.291-385)

IV.1 Vaiṣṇavism, the Devi cult and some monastic manifestations in Vaiṣṇavism
   IV.1.1 Vaiṣṇavism, a doctrinal outline and some epigraphical evidences about the Vaiṣṇava cult IV.1.2 Vaiṣṇavism and the cult of Jagannātha-Puruṣottama in Orissa

IV.2 Śaivism and his contributions to Brahmanical monasticism
   IV.2.1 From the origins of Śaivism to Śaṅkara
   IV.2.2 The Lingam Symbolism, Śaiva-tīrthas and Śaiva-māthas
      IV.2.2.1 Rajasthan
      IV.2.2.2 Eastern Rajasthan and west Madhyadeśa
      IV.2.2.3 The old kingdom of Mālava (Malwa) in Madhyadeśa
      IV.2.2.4 The Gaṅga-Yamuna basin
      IV.2.2.5 Eastern India: Bengal, Orissa and Eastern Madhyadeśa
      IV.2.2.6 The Central Region of Madhyadeśa, Baghelkhand, Bundelkhand and upper Narmadā basin
      IV.2.2.7 Gujarat Coastal areas and the Gulf of Kambhat

NOTES

APPENDIX A (pp.386-388)

APPENDIX B: Schematic presentation in chronological order of Śaiva-vite religious institutions mentioned in epigraphy (pp.389-395)

CHAPTER V: THE PĀŚUPATAS AND THE MATTAMAYŪRAS (pp.396-455)

V.1 The Pāśupatas
   V.1.1 The Pāśupatas of western India and the centre at Sōmanātha
   V.1.2 The Pāśupatas in Madhyadeśa
   V.1.3 Pāśupata activities in Rajasthan
   V.1.4 Pāśupata-pīṭhas in central India and the travels of Tripurāntaka

V.2 The Mattamayūras
   V.2.1 The Mālava and Kadavāhā branches
   V.2.2 Mattamayūras in Maharashtra and the northern areas of Deccan: the antecedent of the Kālāmukha movement
   V.2.3 Some additional doctrinal features of the Mattamayūras

NOTES
CHAPTER VI: TANTRISM AND ŚAKTISM, KĀPĀLIKAS AND KĀLĀMUKHAS AND THEIR ROLE IN THE EARLY MEDIEVAL BRAHMANICAL MONASTICISM (pp.456-513)

VI.1 Tantrism and Śaktism
VI.2 Kāpālikas
VI.3 Kālāmukhas (or Karukas, or Karunikas)

CHAPTER VII: MONASTERIES OF EARLY MEDIEVAL NORTHERN INDIA (pp.514-579)

VII.1 Brahmanical monasteries in Upper Uttara India: Kashmir, Himacaladesa and Viharadesa
VII.1.1 Viharadesa or Bihar
VII.1.2 Himacaladesa or Himachal Pradesh
VII.1.3 Kaśmir or Kashmir
VII.2 Brahmanical monasteries in Madhyadeśa and their interrelation with neighbouring regions
VII.3 Brahmanical monasteries in western India
VII.3.1 Rajasthan
VII.3.2 Gujarat-Maharashtra
VII.4 Brahmanical monasteries in near eastern India, Bangladesh, Odra and Kōsala and their relation with western and southern India
VII.4.1 Orissa
VII.4.2 Eastern Madhya Pradesh

CHAPTER VIII: MAṬHAS: THEIR STRUCTURES AND INTERNAL ORGANIZATION (pp.580-638)

VIII.1 Bengal
VIII.2.1 The controversy on the inscription about the Gōlakī-Maṭha
VIII.2.2 The new Gōlakī-Maṭha: The Viśvēśvara-Gōlakī-Maṭha
VIII.2.3 The institution of the Śri Viśvēśvara-Gōlakī-Maṭha
VIII.2.4 The internal organization of the new Viśvēśvara Gōlakī-Maṭha
VIII.2.5 The spiritual lineage of the old Gōlakī-Maṭha
VIII.2.6 The Gōlakī-Maṭha and the Brahmanical and monastical institutions of eastern Madhyadeśa
VIII.3 Central Madhyadeśa: the monastical complex at Chandrehe
VIII.4 Rajasthan: the Tripuruṣa complex
VIII.4.1 The dēvādāsī problem
VIII.4.2 Other staff
VIII.5 The internal organizations of the Maṭhas: the common elements
VIII.5.1 The head of the maṭha
VIII.5.2 The educational role of the maṭha
VIII.5.3 The maṭhas: common points in their internal organization and external linkages

NOTES

BIBLIOGRAPHY

1. PRIMARY SOURCES
A. TEXTS: INDIAN
   A.1 Vedic texts
   A.2 Buddhist and Jaina texts
      A.2.1 Buddhist
      A.2.2 Jaina
   A.3 Arthaśāstra and Dharmaśāstras
   A.4 Purānic texts
   A.5 Tantric texts
   A.6 Philosophical texts
   A.7 Literary texts
      A.7.1 Poetry
      A.7.2 Historical literary texts
      A.7.3 Drama
      A.7.4 Prose and Narrative

B. TEXTS: NON-INDIAN
   B.1 Arabic (travellers and geographers)
   B.2 Chinese traveller’s records
   B.3 Greek and other western sources

C. TEXTS: PUBLISHED IN SERIES

D. CATALOGUES OF MANUSCRIPTS

E. ARCHAEOLOGICAL REPORTS AND OTHER TYPES OF ARCHAEOLOGICAL MATERIAL

F. EPIGRAPHY

G. NUMISMATICS

2. SECONDARY PUBLICATIONS

3. REFERENCE COLLECTIONS