ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This work would not have been completed but for the favourable blessings of my supervisor, Prof Aditya Mukherjee, who patiently bore my clumsy efforts at writing. Fondly, I remember little Madhvi with whom I spent many a delightful moment while waiting for Sir. I am also indebted to Prof Ghanshyam Shah and Prof Kalpana Shah for encouraging me. Prof Ghanshyam Shah always found time to discuss matters. The staff at J.N.U. Library, C.H.S./D.S.A. Library, The Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, The Central Secretariat Library, The I.C.H.R. Library, and at the National Archives was very cooperative.

During my field visits to Ahmedabad, Prof Dwijendra Tripathi (I.I.M, Ahmedabad) and Prof Makrand Mehta (Gujarat University, Ahmedabad) were very generous with their time and resources. They were of immense help in clarifying ideas. The personnel of various libraries in Ahmedabad: the Gujarat University Library, the Gujarat Vidyapeeth Library, the B.J. Institute of Learning and Research, the M.J. Library, also extended all possible help. Ms. Ila, Research Scholar at Gujarat Vidyapeeth very graciously extended her hospitality and facilitated my stay in Ahmedabad.

Similarly, I got the opportunity to visit Bombay to gather further study material. It was my good fortune to interact with Prof Mariam Dossal (University of Bombay), who took care of all the arrangements and made my stay comfortable. I remember her with gratitude. The staff at the Maharashtra State Archives also extended all possible help. Mr. S.M. Mishra, Research Officer at ICHR, expedited my fellowship procedures.

Writing a thesis is a very lonely affair. It is also an endurance test. Fortunately, I had people who lightened my burden. To all my friends, Mamta, Chitta, Aradhana, Guru, Subu, Archanadi, Kiran, Subhalakshmi, Madhuri, Geetha, Susan, Sanal Sir and Radhika Madame, who laughed and cried with me, and acted as cheerleaders, I will always be indebted. Their constant encouragement was a source of strength. A special note of thanks to Ashraf and Monica who were instrumental in my realising the myriad hues of life.

I do not have sufficient words to thank my family, for it was their hard work and sacrifices, which enabled me to take on this project. They absolved me from all responsibilities and their support was crucial in completing the thesis. A big hug to Kuky, Vinu, Pappu and Apu, who always succeeded in making me smile.

Also, I am grateful to Raju Bhaiyya for his meticulous typing work. All the omissions and commissions remain entirely my fault.

Shailu.
