First and foremost I would like to express my sincere thanks and gratitude to my supervisor Dr. Munmun Majumdar, Associate Professor, Department of Political Science, North Eastern Hill University Shillong, for her invaluable guidance, encouragement and constructive suggestions throughout the entire course of my work without which I would not have completed this work. It was a great pleasure and opportunity for me to work under her inspiring supervision.

I owe a deep sense of gratitude to Professor R. Borgohain, Head Department of Political Science, NEHU and Prof A.K. Baruah who taught me the unforgettable lessons of hard work and sincerity and never refused to extend their support and help in all moments despite their busy engagements. I am indebted to all the teachers of the Department of Political Science, NEHU for their inspiration and suggestions.

I am particularly thankful to the faculty members of OKD Institute of Social Change and Development and Dr. Akhil Ranjan Dutta, my teacher in Gauhati University who helped me a lot in the initial conceptualization of the study.

I gratefully acknowledge the office staff of the Department of Political Science, NEHU for the support extended by them in fulfilling official obligations relating to my work.

I gratefully acknowledge the library support provided by the librarians and other staffs of the North Eastern Hill University, Assam University, Gauhati University, Jawaharlal Nehru University, Jamia Millia Islamia, and University of Delhi for helping me in various ways in pursuance of my research work.

My parents and my sister Lucky, who are a source of inspiration for me, are gratefully acknowledged for their company during the field investigation of the work. I express my heartiest gratitude to Trishna, who always encourages and stands by me in all my endeavour. My thanks go to all my friends for their help and support specifically Chandramoni and Pallavi.

Last but not the least I am highly grateful to Akhil Gogoi, Nikhil Kakoty, Nirmali Borah and all the respondents who gave their valuable time during my interaction with them.
