I dedicate this work to the people of the Narmada Valley who struggle for dignified life and livelihood. This work would not have been possible but for the love, support and solidarity shared in the struggle by the dam-affected people, activists and friends who set apart their time and energy to bring developmental issues to the fore. The time I spent as a co-traveler in struggle was enriching and transforming at the same time.

My association with Dr Raju, my supervisor, throughout the process of this work, was invaluable. He challenged me to think beyond what I have experienced and enabled a self reflexive analysis of the issue. He diligently guided me to differentiate between academic and activist language. But for his astute guidance, this work would not have been possible in this shape.

The Faculty, Staff and fellow-students of the School of Social Sciences, who educated me in social science methodologies, propelled critical debates and discussions and gave relevant inputs at various stages of the work, deserve my gratitude. Dr Rajan Gurukkal, Dr Sanal Mohan, Saju, Vipin and Anil deserve special mention.

My family, who stood by me through the ups and downs of this long period of study (eight years), not only tolerated me but encouraged me to complete the work. The forbearance and affection of my father Rev. Dr. K V Mathew, mother Rachel Mathew, brother Geeve Mathew & family, my wife Ansu and kids Abhishek and Tamanna are remembered with love and gratitude.
