I would like to express my sincerest gratitude to my guide Dr. Fatima T. Sugarwala who has patiently guided me all through. Though she would never approve of the use of these words for herself, she is a person who of all persons is the best. In spite of being imbued with deep knowledge, she is an epitome of humanity. Any session with her would guarantee a fascinating voyage through a maze of ideas. She has always been a source of inspiration and has awakened in me the unquenchable thirst for knowledge and learning. If there is anybody who deserves to be called a Guru in the real sense of the word, it is she.

I must also thank retired principal Dr. Hansaben Sheth, our campus director Prof. P. C. Chhapia and the librarian Mrs. Urvashiben Trivedi as well as her staff who made all required books readily available.

I would also like to acknowledge the help extended by Prof. Anil R. Dwivedi in helping me work with some of the Sanskrit classics and Dr. Ketan C. Dholakia for being so supportive. Their scholastic personalities have inspired me a lot. I am also grateful to Ranjan Trivedi who has helped me type all Sanskrit Slokas. I am also grateful to Prof. Pooja Trivedi for doing a very tough task of proof reading this thesis within a very short period of time.

I can never forget my mother late Smt. Sarlaben Makodia and my father late Vinodray C. Makodia who have poured in me the seeds of interest in Indian scriptures and epics. Being a religious lady, my mother has shaped my thinking towards religious traditions of our culture which has been of immense help to me during my course of this research.

My dearest better-half Neepa too has always been a source of inspiration for me. She is the one who has prodded me on when I failed to deliver what I wanted and encouraged me in moments of fits of disappointment.

Last but not the least; I thank God for seeing me through this journey, always being there when I most needed Him.
