‘Nano’- science and technology boom, the fourth industrial revolution, has aroused new excitement among scientists all over the world. Nanomaterials are thought to play an important role in everyday life of human beings because of their potential applications in diverse fields. A great deal of research focused on the synthesis, modification of advanced nanomaterials to be used as catalysts for eco-energy production and emerging contaminants degradation and rejections.