ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS AND CREDITS

Every research work is a social process; therefore, social support for it creeps in from many sections of the society. Same has been the case with my research work. I could not have completed this research work without the help, support, contribution and guidance of a number of people. And often we miss the opportunity or undermine the importance of simple expressions of life. One of them is ‘saying thank you’. I take this opportunity to offer my sincere thanks to each one of them who helped me in the completion of this doctoral study.

The present research work would have been directionless without the rich inputs of both of my learned supervisors, Professor Dr. Gurjeet Singh, Founder Vice-Chancellor, Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law (RGNUL), Punjab and presently Vice-Chancellor, National Law University and Judicial Academy, Assam at Guwahati and Professor Dr. Surinder K. Shukla, Professor, University School of Open Learning, Panjab University, Chandigarh. Both of them are perhaps a rare combination of great academic and research work and of world class practical experience. Further a mesmerizing thing common to both of them is their readiness to help and zest to more and more constructive works in their profession. While Dr. Gurjeet Singh took care of the formatting related works of the thesis as if it is his own work, Professor Shukla was ready with the answers to my doubts related to political concepts related to the thesis. During this period of working with them they not only guided my research but also shaped my personality. I would remember some simple sentences of these two great people till the last breath of my life. I thank them for their ‘Midas Touch’!

I would sincerely like to thank Professor (Dr.) Paramjit Singh Jaswal, the Vice-Chancellor, RGNUL, Punjab for his unconditional encouragement and moral support for every kind of research and academic work I have undertaken under his leadership. His constant patronage and motivating attitude enabled me to accomplish my academic projects successfully on time. His belief and support to my idea of establishing a School of Social Sciences and Inter-Disciplinary Studies (SSSIS) is a great opportunity provided to me by him to explore the innovation in inter-disciplinary research. I would leave no stone unturned to prove that his confidence in this idea of mine was correct.

I would also like to thank and express my deep gratitude towards Professor (Dr.) G.I.S. Sandhu, the Registrar, RGNUL, Punjab for his rich inputs and guidance whenever I felt dire need for it. He has always been supportive and ready with a solution to any problem with an unmatched calmness. I also thank him for his faith he has been posing in my academic initiatives and has shown absolute support to the idea of SSSIS. I take this opportunity to tell him that I respect his confidence in me and I value it with complete sincerity.

I heartily thank all my teachers at the Department of Political Science, Guru Nanak Dev University, Amritsar. The teaching and research related achievements of my teachers have been a great imprint on my mind. As true 'Gurus' they have been a great support for me even after thirteen long years I left my parent department.

I also wish to thank Professor (Dr.) Venkata Rao, the Vice-Chancellor, National Law School India University (NLSIU), Bangalore for his inputs to my synopsis and the general outlook of my research. It was a great honour to have received encouragement from the scholar of his stature. I am also deeply indebted to Professor (Dr.) Venugopal, who was instrumental in the framing of the South Asian Social Charter and who gave valuable comments to my write up on the South Asian Social Charter. His humble approach captivated me completely.

Dr. Satish Sharma, Professor, Department of Political Science, Punjabi University, Patiala, was also very helpful in the completion of this work. I wish to thank him for his valuable suggestions and help. In addition to my academic life, he has been a great moral boost to me and has been a fatherly figure.

I would also like to thank Professor (Dr.) Eckert Klien, retired Professor, University of Potsdam in Germany, whom I met during my participation in the 40th Study Session in Human Rights in 2009 at the International Institute of Human Rights (IIDH) at Strasbourg in France for adding the tinge of his experience to my research work. He allowed me to remain in his contact for research purposes and I am highly impressed by his simple yet sophisticated approach towards human rights monitoring under the aegis of the United Nations. My interaction with him has proven to be very helpful for me since he shared his practical experience with me when he was member of the Treaty Body for the ICCPR (International Covenant for Civil and Political Rights), that is, the Human Rights Committee.

Dr. Kathleen Mahoney, Professor of Law, University of Calgary, Canada has been another source of great moral and academic support for me. Like Dr. Klien, I met Dr. Mahoney me at Strasbourg in 2009. The understanding between us grew in such a way that she even came to be a part of the first Multidisciplinary Congress organised by me in March 2011. Her dedication to the promotion of human rights has indeed been inspiring for me.

My experience with the Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative (CHRI), an international level NGO working for in the arena of human rights for a long time, was made even more enriching by Dr. Heather Collister, the then Legal consultants to CHRI, New Delhi. Heather and I were planning to attend a conference in Thailand, which I had to drop due to some unavoidable reasons. When I shared my disappointment with Heather and also shared that I wanted to collect responses over some aspect of my doctoral work from the speakers and participants of a session on South Asia and SAARC in that conference, she immediately asked me to e-mail her the questionnaire and said that she would circulate these amongst the participants and would also post the collected response sheets to me when she comes, which is exactly what she did. She also agreed to my proposal of holding an International Workshop on Human Rights Advocacy in collaboration with CHRI and managed every formality at their end. The event was held at RGNUL in 2009.

I am also deeply beholden to Professor (Dr.) Swaranjit Kaur, Head, Center for Human Rights and Duties, Panjab University, Chandigarh for her academic support which was readily available whenever I needed. Her appreciation has been a great motivation for me to keep working.

I want to thank Professor (Dr.) Henri Pallard, Director, International Centre for Interdisciplinary Research and Learning (ICIRL), Laurentian University, Canada, whom I met in 2012 and he has been a great support to me. His humble nature, readiness to explore new areas of academics is very fascinating. Similarly, Dr. Neville Hewage from the same University is a good friend now and I want to thank him for believing in me and coming to RGNUL with an offer for collaboration. He signifies that perseverance pays, as I just came in his contact for a conference in the end of 2009 and from there we are here in 2013 as contact persons of the two partner institutions. Having met them both has been a great morale boost to me.

All the staff members of RGNUL’s library deserve to be mentioned of here since they have been very prompt and willing to help regarding collection and systemization of my print research material in works like, binding, photocopying, locating and tracing books, etc. etc. especially, in the initial time of my research work.

My students have also been of great help to me. They have been there at my beck and call and have shown their unconditional respect towards me; which is an unusual feature now-a-days. I find myself fortunate enough that they are part of my life as a teacher. They are also my inspiration to improve as a teacher.

As we say every bird comes back to its nest no matter how long and adventurous its flight was, similarly, after having mentioned a number of people from different parts of the world I render my deepest and heartfelt thanks to my late mother who completely identified with my achievements as her own. I thank my father for encouraging the student in me. And it is her death anniversary on 30 June that I am going to submit my thesis.

I am fortunate that I got married into a family of intellectuals as my in-laws have been very supportive of all my academic works. Unparallel sacrifices have been made by my husband, Amol, who offered his unconditional support to me when I needed it the most. My parents wanted me to do great things but it is my husband who has created an environment for me to be able make attempts. I take this opportunity to tell him that I am thankful to him from the core of my heart for making me capable to do everything that I have done since I have met him and that he is my Omen!

As a mother, my heart goes out while mentioning that I am so very much thankful to my children, Aarza and Seerat, who without even knowing about what research
I was doing, felt proud of it and boasted of it in their school circle. This doctoral work has been invested in with the time which was due to my small kids. I have been strongly driven by the idea that I have to present myself to my daughters as a strong and thinking woman, and I think my involvement with my doctoral research has greatly contributed to it.

I thank my sister and brother for simply being there and keeping their confidence in me.

I thank the Almighty for having placed me amongst so many gentle souls who helped me though this phase of my life which otherwise would have been tough.

The beauty of human mind is not only in remembering but also in forgetting certain things, because when the mind is reminded of those missed things the memories attached to them give more happiness. Therefore, I offer my apology to everyone and anyone whom I missed in this note I assure them all that the imprints of their goodness are still and will always remain there on my life!
