ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In completing the present study, I have received great encouragement and help from a number of persons and institutions in India and abroad. First of all, my gratitude goes in full measure to Professor K.P. Misra, Chairman, Centre for International Politics and Organizations, who ably supervised my work and gave me great encouragement. I am thankful to Professor K.P. Anand, who not only suggested the topic of the thesis to me but also gave me valuable guidance as to how I should proceed with the work. I owe a special debt of gratitude to Professor M.L. Sondhi, who has been always a great source of inspiration, insight, and encouragement. My special thanks are also due to Dr Nehendra Kumar, Dr T. T. Poulose and Dr K.P. Saksena, who substantially helped me in many ways in the final stages of the thesis.

I am also greatly indebted to Professor Norman D. Palmer, Professor Oscar Schachter, Professor Hans J. Morgenthau, Professor Johan Galtung, Dr R. Arndt, Professor M.K. Nawaz, Professor J.S. Bains and Professor M.S. Agwani. I have been greatly benefited by my discussions with them. I would also like to place on record and gratefully acknowledge, though without mentioning individual names, the very kind interest shown in my work and encouragement and help given to me in various ways, by a number of my teachers, colleagues and well-wishers in Delhi University and at the School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University.
I would not have been able to complete the work without the grant made by the School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, to cover the expenses of my travel to the headquarters of the United Nations, New York, and to the headquarters of the Organization of American States, Washington, on a field-research programme in 1972. During my stay in the United States, I had the advantage of consulting the Dag Hammerskjoeld Library and the UNIFAR Library at the United Nations, New York, and the OAS Library and the Library of Congress in Washington. I am thankful to the staff of these libraries for their help and assistance.

I also thank the Librarian and the staff of the Sapru House Library, New Delhi, for their willing co-operation and ready assistance throughout the period of my work.
