Acknowledgement

I am highly grateful to my teacher Prof. A. K. Dasgupta, Professor of International Finance, Indian School of International Studies, under whose guidance this dissertation was completed. He went through the various drafts and gave invaluable comments. In spite of his preoccupation, he gave his time most ungrudgingly. In fact, my debt of gratitude to him is so large that I doubt if I can acknowledge it suitably.

I am also thankful to my teacher Shri G. S. Raychaudhri, Delhi School of Economics. In fact it was he who created in me an interest for research work and suggested to me the possibilities of the present subject.

I am thankful to Dr. K. K. Dewett, Principal, Dyal Singh College, New Delhi, who constantly encouraged and provoked me to expedite my work. He facilitated my research in every possible manner in his power.

I am thankful to my friend Shri A. K. Khuller who went through the entire dissertation and suggested numerous improvements in the language and presentation.
