ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First of all, I bow my head in reverence to the God Almighty, for providing me with this opportunity to work with the intelligentsia and enabling me to reach far beyond my own, restricted ambit of thought and action.

I am greatly indebted to Dr. Satish Verma, Professor, Punjab School of Economics, Guru Nanak Dev University, Amritsar, under whose wise and insightful guidance; this dissertation was undertaken and completed. This imprint of the privilege, I have had learning from one who combines academic expertise with human compassion as he does, will always remain with me.

I extend my gratitude to Dr. Gian Kaur, Head, Punjab School of Economics, for extending various departmental facilities. I am also thankful to Dr. Sunil, Reader, Punjab School of Economics, Guru Nanak Dev University, Amritsar, discussions with whom have helped in refining this research.

I must thank Dr. Subhash C Ray, interactions with whom at a workshop organized at Indira Gandhi Institute of Research And Development and the following telephonic conversations helped improve the quality of this dissertation, especially Chapter 6. Thanks are also due to Dr. S. Sarkar, Professor, IGIDR, discussion with whom also helped my work in a number of ways.

I duly acknowledge the services of the staff at departmental library of Punjab School of Economics, in particular S. Mukhtiar Singh, who has always extended support for consulting various books and other references. I also express thank to all the staff of the library, Institute Of Economic Growth, New Delhi; Rattan Tata Library, University Of New Delhi; Indira Gandhi Institute Of Development And Research, Mumbai; Bhai Gurdas Library, Guru Nanak Dev University, Amritsar, for providing me the library facilities.

I will be confining myself to the charge of selfishness, if I do not thank Holger Schaefer, Universitat Dortmund, Germany; Dr. Tim Coelli, University of Queensland, Australia; and Paul W. Wilson, Clemson University, USA, softwares written by whom and available in the public domain have been very extensively used in the present research.

I would be wanting in grace if I don't express gratitude to all the members of my family for their cooperation. My mother and father deserve special thanks for providing me constant encouragement and inspiration. My brother Dinesh and bhabi Sandeep deserve a special mention for bearing with me in every possible manner, without whose contributions, this work would not have been possible. Special thanks are also due to Ms Vanlila Parekh for her encouragement throughout the course of this work and excellent help in proof reading the manuscript towards the end.

Last but not the least; I am thankful to my friends and colleagues for providing me assistance in gathering the data. I wish to thank many people, who have assisted me with this thesis and, without whom, it would not have been completed.

All cannot be mentioned but always be remembered.
