Social Consciousness

True Culture lies not in slanting and suppressing but guiding and ennobling the natural instinct.

For literature which is essentially rational is not the work of a generation; it can be come fully in to its own, be purely established, only after a process of environment, through which the average instincts have been adopted to it, and every perceptible difficulty has been smoothed away.

"Kendal Forest", 'the Rape of the Lock'. Essay on "religion", 'Riddle on man' described "soul" and the ideas were well enough under the name of "love", but it did not suit the sentiments of the age, and the demand grew for a more "rational" and "scientific" approach to religion - "The Dunciad" reacted against the symptoms of an awakening of the middle class spirit, in taste.

Reason gains bolder steps to work upon the obscure bank of religion, and pride appears destructive to the essential beliefs of Christianity and the "Anima Mundi" (1731) describes a new view of the universe. It appears that the battle between "Reasonable Christianity" (1731) and "irrational" Christianity is far from over.

The qualities of this type revolved around two foci: intellectual and moral austerity. A mind sharp, alert, versatile, open to every impression, and also sensitive to beauty — a rare commodity.

In conclusion, let us consider the role played by intellectual and moral austerities. These qualities are essential for the growth of individuals and society.

Man is, because he can say (No, it is a man who is good, the whole universe is.

In a godless age (Sartre is an atheist) man can say ‘No’ to the whole structure of the universe; to history, to nature, to everything except his own capacity to deny.

And is useless and costly hypotheses. So no and a law amending world. It is essential that Common Values.
