CONTENTS

Preface

Introduction
A Conceptual Scheme of American Foreign Policy-Making
Some Hypotheses on the Place of the Military in the Power Structure
Evolution of the Department of Defence

Chapter I
The American Involvement in Vietnam from the End of the Second World War to 1961
The Eisenhower Administration and Vietnam
The Geneva Conference
Post-Geneva American Policy in Vietnam
Elections Not Held
Rising Tide of Insurgency
The Impact of Sino-Soviet Rift on American Attitude towards Vietnam
The Pentagon

Chapter II
Civil-Military Interaction in the Pentagon I
"McNamara Evolution"
The Despatch of Combat Troops
The Overthrow of Diem
The Tonkin Gulf Incident
Beginning of War
Chapter III  Civil-Military Interaction in the Pentagon

44 Battalions - 200,000 Men Request

The Efficacy of the Air War and the Issue: "Bombing Pauses"

The Role of Extra-Pentagon Variables

Chapter IV  Competition among Federal Actors to Influence Foreign Policy-Making

Kennedy's Decision to Increase the Number of Military Advisers

American Involvement in the Coup against Diem

The Tonkin Gulf Incident: The Preparation for the Launching of Rolling Thunder

The US Enters the War: The Launching of Rolling Thunder

The Beginning of US Combat Role in Vietnam

Escalation and De-escalation: Pull and Haul Within

Chapter V  The Interaction between the Pentagon and Congress in Relation to Vietnam Policy

Theoretical Framework

Congress' Attitude towards Vietnam in 1950s

Initial Congressional Assessment of McNamara

McNamara and Congress Fight Over Hardware
Harmony and Discord in the Pentagon: Impact on Congress

Pentagon Fails to Supply Accurate Information to Congress

Failure of Congress to Subject Pentagon Presentation to Critical Scrutiny

Hawks and Doves in Congress

Some Concluding Observations 434-449

Bibliography 450-468