ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The present thesis would not have been possible without the generous help of so many friends and well-wishers. Every aspect and dimension of it owes a great deal to Professor K. Seshadri who was not only my guide but also a constant critic and an unendingly tolerant teacher. Earlier I was fortunate to have the guidance of Dr. Aswani Ray who went through an earlier draft and steered me on the right course. Professors Kasheedu-ddin Khan and C.P. Bhambri were of great help with their suggestions and constant encouragement. Several friends who were sympathetic came forward with their cooperation readily. I have to particularly mention Harinath Polasa, Pritam Singh and Mohan Ram among them.

My debt to Shri Lat e Ravi Subba Rao is enormous. Without this sustained help of this eminent and dedicated lawyer I would not have got access to at least half of the material that I have used in my work. A few other lawyers and friends enabled me to get over my difficulties in the collection of material.

I feel grateful to Shri D.R. Pratap of Tribal Cultural and Research Training Institute, Hyderabad, and Shri Chandramouli of the Girijan Cooperative Corporation who were extremely helpful for providing me the opportunity to gather material from their Institutes. The police and the jail officials did give many suggestions with kind words but not much information.

Especial gratitude is due to Shri G. Suryanarayana who painstakingly typed the final draft of the dissertation and to Shri Venkateswaran and Shri Menon who earlier did the work of typing the previous drafts.

I have also to express my indebtedness to all those individuals who have helped me in many ways and who prefer to remain anonymous.

However the drawbacks that this dissertation still contains are entirely my own responsibility.
