ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Attention to scholarly writings on South Africa - UK relations is quite important in gauging the interaction between these two countries. However, while there is no dearth of studies on the topic, they are generally uneven in focus. In particular, they often display an abysmal poverty of knowledge concerning the background forces within which the relationship between South Africa and the United Kingdom is maintained. The present thesis attempts to look at the above lacuna and illustrate the answer by making an indepth study of one such relationship. The present work is a distillation of approximately four years of effort.

My interest in writing this doctoral thesis stemmed from the able and exacting direction of my supervisor Prof. Vijay Gupta, CWAAS/SIS/JNU. I consider it a rare privilege to have worked under him. I shall never be able to repay his continued help support and guidance throughout my Ph.D work.

I have also profited from the intellectual rigor and substantive knowledge of Dr. Peter Lyon, Institute of Commonwealth Studies, London; Prof. Dennis Austin, Prof. Tom Young, School of Oriental and African Studies, London; Prof. (i)
William Gutteridge, Research Institute for study of Conflict and Terrorism, London, Prof. Shula Marks, ICS, London and Prof. James Mayal, London School of Economics. Additionally, I need to acknowledge Dr. Peter Lyon for giving me an opportunity to present a paper on 'Britain and South Africa' at the Institute of Commonwealth Studies, London.

In the course of my research work I received valuable suggestions and encouragement from Air Commodore. Jasjit Singh, Director, Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses, New Delhi, and Prof. K.R. Singh, CWAAS, SIS, JNU. I owe my utmost gratitude to them.

I am thankful to the Jawaharlal Nehru University and Indian Council of Social Science Research, for bearing the expenditure incurred in connection with my field trip to United Kingdom, which was of great benefit to me.

While writing my thesis I had the opportunity to consult material available at various libraries, both in India and the United Kingdom. I would like to mention particularly the libraries of the J.N.U., Delhi University, Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses and Indian Council of World Affairs library in New Delhi and the libraries of the British Museum, the London School of Economics, School of Oriental and African Studies, Institute of Commonwealth Studies in London. I wish to express my gratitude to the members of the staff of all these libraries for their willing assistance and courteous co-operation.

I owe a great deal to my parents, without whose support and encouragement I would not have been able to undertake this work. I take this opportunity to thank my sisters, Balvinder, Sukhvinder and Surjit Bhaji for their best wishes in the completion of this work.

I am extremely thankful to my friend Ananta Vijaya Patnaik (Munna) for his help and encouragement throughout this work. I am also thankful to my friends Rahul, Biju, Munindra, Vikram, Virender, Goswami, Mahinder, Hardev, Randhir, Davender, Soni, Sanju, Sahuji, Rajat, and Qumrul, for their good wishes and co-operation.

Finally I express my thanks to Arpan Photostat for neatly typing my thesis.
