POEMS OF EXILE AND DIASPORA:
A STUDY OF AGHA SHAHID ALI’S POETRY

FATIMA NOORI

2018
Acknowledgment

The present project owes much to the constant support and timely help of many people. I would like to express my gratitude to the people and institutions that have helped me in the completion of this current project.

Foremost gratitude and respect is due to my Supervisor Professor Sonjoy Dutta Roy who has been a guiding force throughout the project. He helped and guided me from the initial stages of deciding upon the research topic to pushing me to read further and further, to devoting time to read and re-read through my work to helping me shape the structure of this thesis. Most PhD scholars face a time when they want to give up their literary pursuits. Professor Roy was not only insistence that I stay put but his faith and his loving support kept me going. He made me push my boundaries and work harder to make the present dissertation happen.

Next in line is Dr Jaya Kapoor, who though not being directly responsible for my work, was always there whenever I needed her. She allowed me to discuss with her the smallest glitches or confusions that I had in planning my dissertation. Her availability at all hours and for all matters was not only helpful academically but has also inspired me as a future teacher and academician.

Much gratitude is due to the United States India Educational Foundation for funding and supporting my Fulbright-Nehru Doctoral Fellowship Grant to the United States in the year 2015-16. The fellowship has helped me with my research on Agha Shahid Ali’s life and work. It allowed me to explore the resources available at the Hamilton College, New York by funding my travel and stay there. The experience brought a new insight into my work. The Agha Shahid Ali Digital Archives at the Burke Library, Patricia O’Neill, who was my supervisor during the Fulbright Project, Lisa Trivedi and Thomas Wilson from the Asia Studies Department, Hamilton College also deserve a special mention for helping me academically as well as being there personally.

The Department of English and Modern European Languages, University of Allahabad has always been an endearing support and was there for me whenever I needed. Special thanks to the staffers— Ram Sanjeev bhaiyya, Kasim Bhai and the librarian Pandeyji.

Libraries of University of Delhi, Jawaharlal Nehru University, Jamia Milia University, Osmania University’s Centre for International Programme, English and Foreign Languages University, and SCILET Madurai have been generous with their access to the resources.

An inexpressible gratitude is due to my parents who remain my pillars in all times— happy and sad. They not only encouraged me for this pursuit but also bore my absence from various routine chores with loving support.

Some friends—Anupam, Diwakar, Pankaj, Sadaf, and Sonali, deserve a respectable mention to have supported me through this long time. Their faith, motivation and their presence made much indirect difference to this thesis.

Fatima Noori