ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This work would not have been possible without the support and guidance of several people. Firstly, I must thank my supervisor, Dr. Qazi M. Usman for his able guidance. His humility and calm attitude are infectious. There were several occasions when his inputs and guidance proved to be immensely helpful. I would also like to thank Professor (Dr.) Nuzhat Parveen Khan, Dean, Faculty of Law for her blessings and constant encouragement, and also for her invaluable advice about prioritising my research above everything else.

There were moments, during the course of my doctoral research, which tested me-intellectually, emotionally, and personally. And I could overcome those only because of the love and faith of my parents. My mother endured a lot during this period- my tantrums, my frustrations, my self-doubts and long periods of ill-health. My father helped me negotiate some particularly painful moments. It is true that in a thesis that predominantly relates to IPRs, the authorship would be mine but the real seeds of this thesis, of my entire education and of my outlook towards life, were sown by my parents. They, therefore, deserve as much credit as I do, and possibly more.

I must thank Dr. Vijaylaxmi Pandit (Maa), for her love and warmth, for being an inspiration and for, also, admonishing me at times. I must express gratitude towards Kavita Mehta ma’am, for believing in me when no one else did and for allowing her students to always think and question, and more importantly, to dream. I thank also Dr. Vikrant Narayan Vasudeva, for insisting, during the course of our first patent matter together, that I must promptly finish my thesis. There are others, who have stayed in the background and supported me silently- my friends from Rajdhani College- Mukesh, Megha Joshi Yadav, Vibha Gandhi, Vikas and Linu. And my mates from Campus Law Centre- Piyush, Kunal Bhatia, Gagan Kathuria and, especially Ritesh Sharma and Manish Mishra- Ritesh and Manish extended immense moral support in the last phase of my work and have been extremely compassionate.

I also thank the officials of NLUD’s library, from where I got most of the material for my work. I must also thank the extremely supportive administrative staff of our Faculty of Law at Jamia Millia Islamia, and I must thank my fellow scholars, especially Nida, Zeeshan, Vikalp Srivastava, Samia Khan, Dakshita Sangwan, Ashwini Siwal and Parikshet Sirohi- for making this journey so enriching and wonderful.
