ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First, I would like to prayfully thank the almighty for blessing and guiding me in all my endeavours in my life.

I extend my profound and hearty thanks to my research Guide Dr. S. Iyyampillai, Professor of Economics, Bharathidasan University, for his encouragement and valuable guidance from the inception to the completion of the thesis, without which this piece of work may not be shaped and become a reality.

I also thank the office of Vice-Chancellor, Registrar, Controller of Examinations, Centre for College and Curriculum Development and other authorities of Bharathidasan University, for offering me this golden opportunity to do my research in this esteemed University. From my deepest heart I thank the Doctoral Committee members Dr.N.Prasanna and Dr. P. Natarajamurthy as well as the department faculties who instilled in me the spirit of reflective thinking and who encourage me every time during my research work. May my deepest gratitude goes to Ministry of Education, Ambo University, Ethiopian Embassy to New Delhi and Faculty Members of the Department of Cooperatives of Ambo University for moral, financial and the technical support they have made to me in the course of my research.

My warmest thank goes to Dr. A. Tamilarasu, and Tolera Merdasa who really have supported my family in my absence. I am also very much indebted to Dr. M. Karthikeyan, Dr. C. Paramasivan and Ms. Hiwot Bekele who have supported me in all aspects during my study in India. I really thank from my bottom of heart Mr. R. Manimohan for his encouragement and valuable suggestions to further enrich my thesis. My sincere gratitude also goes to Mr. J.Ayyappan for his wonderful hospitality in AMMAN lodge while I was staying in India.

I sincerely thank my brothers Engineer Belay Tadesse, and Engineer Solomon Tadesse and Fantahun Teka; and my sisters Fekade, Workinesh and Helen Tadesse for their patience in looking after my family and who have morally and financially supported me during my study.
The last but not the least I extend my hearty thanks to my lovely wife Frehiwot Zewdie for taking care of me and the whole family and for you are always behind my success. May God bless my daughter Eden, my sons Matiyas and Biniyam Moges for your love and affection that always gives me joy of life and stamina in making my dreams a reality.

I am forever indebted to my Mother Abebech Gemechu and my Father Tadesse Bedane who brought me up with discipline and moral and for their endless patience and prayer in my life. I dedicate this humble piece of work to my mother.

I am very grateful to those who genuinely have delivered me all the required information and data without which this thesis could have not been a reality. At the end of this attempt, I realize that a thesis is not the brainchild of a single person but it is a product of a fruitful cooperation and interaction of all parties involved. This makes me feel intellectually humble. As a result I am profoundly grateful to all my friends, relatives, colleagues, scholars, experts, respondents and others who helped me directly or indirectly in the completion of this study.
