ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

May I use this opportunity to express my sincere gratitude and obligations to my supervising teacher and guide Dr. Mahajan P. Mani, Professor & Director, School of Gandhian Thought & Development Studies Mahatma Gandhi University Priyadarshini Hills, Kottayam for the consistent, perseverant and continuous support and guidance offered to me throughout the period of study as well as in the preparation of this thesis.

My gratitude to all the present and former members of the faculty and ministerial staff of School of Gandhian Thought & Development Studies Mahatma Gandhi University is recorded here.

My appreciation and thanks to Prof. A.J. Johnson, former Professor of Health Education in the School of Medical Education for initiating me into this research and for paving the way for my association with social medicine and the faculty of social sciences.

I express my sincere gratitude to Dr. Elizabeth Varghese, Dr. Madan Mohan, Dr. K.A. Kumar, Dr. P. Chandramohan and Dr. N. Sudhayakumar, Principals of Kottayam Medical College for permitting me and promoting my interests in this field. I am also thankful to them for having granted me the chance to stay in my department and interact with the patients, staff and students of Kottayam Medical College.

My gratitude to the uncountable cooperation extended to me by the staff and students of the Infectious Diseases Unit who have taught me more than I would have done for them and for helping me on various steps directly and indirectly.

Thanks are expressed to many sources of information, formal and informal, which has come from various officers and office bearers of the (erstwhile) Kerala State AIDS Cell, Kerala State AIDS Control Society, National AIDS Control Organisation, Govt. of India, Christian Medical Association of India, Association of Physicians of India and the Indian Medical Association who also has helped me form a career in the specialty and thereby nurtured my interests in HIV medicine.

My thanks are due to all the organizers and delegates of the various awareness and orientation programs in the length and breadth of Kerala (and India) to which I was invited. Through the interactions with these people lot of insights were gained about the Kerala population.
My thanks are expressed to the many college principals, NSS program officers, NSS program coordinators and volunteers and other teachers and students of Arts & Science colleges in various universities of Kerala.

All what was learned from the study and what is being recorded here comes from what my patients and their relatives have been teaching me. My unmeasurable gratitude to all of them, whose sufferings paved the way for a new light for the coming people.

The help rendered by my microchips in my computers and internet is beyond words.

My family has given me extensive support all the time and let me express my gratitude and pleasure with all of them.

God Almighty was always with me in my times of distress and enjoyment which made me possible and no words will express how much I owe there.
