ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I acknowledge my greatest debt and convey my deepest gratitude to Professor Tanika Sarkar, Centre for Historical Studies, JNU, who guided me at every step of this research.

I am also grateful to my family-members and friends who inspired me in every step of this work. I fondly remember my grandmother who left us a year ago. She had taken a great deal of interest in this work and would have loved to see its completion.

I do not have enough words to thank the participants in this research. They spared their valuable time, provided me with various new insights and shared some of their deepest thoughts with me. This work is as much theirs as mine.

I am also indebted to the librarians and staff of the different libraries and archives I visited in the course of this work.

A last word of gratitude to my daughter Krittika, who has smartly borne the biggest burden of this work during the long periods of our separation.
