ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to offer sincere thanks to my Ph.D. supervisor, Dr Jibu Mathew George, for providing me excellent guidance during the last five years as I grappled with ideas concerning my research problem. The long discussions we had on a regular basis about literature and philosophy have contributed immensely to my intellectual growth. I have been touched by his kindness. I thank Dr Dilip Naik for his support in the duration of this programme.

I am deeply grateful to Prof. Geetha Durairajan for being a friend and advisor through thick and thin over 11 years. Without her support and editing skills, this thesis would have remained incomplete. Chintan Girish Modi has enriched the chapters contained in this dissertation with his careful proofreading. I thank him for this, and much else that is beautiful in our friendship spanning a decade.

It was Prof. Javed Alam’s course on Western philosophy, which ran from August to November 2005, and reading James Joyce’s Ulysses with Dr Rajiv C. Krishnan from January to April 2007, which sparked my interest in the close and meticulous study of texts. Therefore, I want to acknowledge Prof. Alam and the role of my teacher and mentor Dr Krishnan in my life. It was he, nine years ago, who first suggested that I pursue research on writings by blind authors.

I thank Upamanyu Sengupta for standing by me over the last five years, and for participating in stimulating discussions centring on literature, philosophy, and politics. I want to give sincere thanks to Rupesh Kotte and Jerin Jacob Mathew for generously helping me with formatting the thesis, and preparing a number of documents related to the submission process. I am deeply indebted to Dr Max Ubelaker Andrade for his generous friendship. He has helped me think carefully about Borges while writing, initially two papers, and later two chapters for my thesis, on the Argentine’s works. My good friend Konkon Das has given generously of his time, help, and company over the years of my doctoral programme, and I want to thank him for that.

I am grateful to the Librarian in Charge, Dr N. Satish, and the staff of Ramesh Mohan Library, EFL University, for their timely help in procuring books and articles important for my research. The Cell for the Disabled was established with the active support of the vice chancellor of our university, Prof. Sunaina Singh, and is functioning well under the leadership of the co-ordinator Prof. Kona Prakash Reddy and deputy co-ordinators Dr Amit Kumar and Mr Rajasekhar. Ms Lavanya and Mr Sampath Kumar have helped immensely in enabling students with disabilities to pursue their studies. I wish to thank all these persons as well as the department for providing me invaluable help and support during my Ph.D. tenure. I would like to express my gratitude to Prof Mahasweta Sengupta, Prof Lakshmi Chandra, Prof A. V. Ashok, Prof Alok Bhalla and Prof Syed A. Sayeed for their encouragement and academic guidance over the years.

My thanks also go to Dr Elizebeth Abele the executive director of Northeast Modern Language Association during their 45th Annual Convention in April 2014. The feedback I received on the Borges paper I presented in that conference helped me develop my arguments for this thesis. I am grateful to Dr Hannah Thompson and Dr Vanessa Warne, co-organisers of the Blind Creations conference in June 2015. I presented a second paper on Borges’s short fiction at this conference, and it has been of great help to my thesis.

The following people have contributed greatly in making my life on campus comfortable: the ward boys of Basheer Men’s Hostel, workers at both the men’s and ladies’ messes, and the two Sagar brothers who run the campus store. I thank these friends for everything.

Finally, I express my heartfelt gratitude to my parents, sister Gayatri, and her family, for their sustaining love and constant support, without which my work would be impossible.
