I am in debt to my mentor and guide Dr. M. Lakshmi Narasu (Director, IST), for giving me the opportunity to fulfill my dream of obtaining the doctorate in the faculty of Biotechnology. She was instrumental in making the thesis see daylight. I am thankful to Dr. Archana Giri (Head, CBT), for giving her valuable inputs during my research endeavours. She has been a pillar of strength in my darkest moments, which helped me sail smooth.

My heartfelt thanks to Dr. C. C. Giri (Professor, CPMB, O U), for the judicious assistance. I express my sincere thanks to Dr. Y. Prameela Devi (UGC visiting professor, Kakatiya university) & my gratitude to Dr. A. Uma (Co-ordinator, CIR), for the moral support they offered throughout the voyage. This work would not have been started, if not for the helping hand given by Dr. Gangagni Rao A (Scientist, IICT).

My friend and colleague, Ms. Bhuvaneswari chodisetti (CSIR-SRF), has given unstinted support throughout the study. My junior Ms. Suryakala gandi (Project assistant), has done everything possible in her limit. I deeply appreciate the timely help provided by Mr. S. S. S. Nageshwar Rao (CSIR-JRF, IICT). I would like to mention my friends Mr. Umamaheshwara rao ganguru and Ms. Baby Rani goluguri for their hilarious touch to make this an eventful academic Journey at the University.

Words fail me in thanking my husband, Mr. Rao Srinivasa Rama Rao and my son Master. Amoghavarsha Rao for having infused confidence, determination and concentration levels to finish the Project. I am obliged to my Father-in-Law, Late Sri. R. V. Butchi Papa Rao and Mother-in-Law, Mrs. Prameela Rao for giving me the desired mental support at the right time.

My Grandmother Late Smt. Vimala Devi Vala, put my course above all other domestic duties & obligations and was instrumental in evolving my mental Strength which I inculcated to survive the adverse conditions.

Last but not the least, I thank the Lord Almighty, for giving me enough courage and strength to carry on this work with grit and power and also for giving so many wonderful human beings around me, who helped me accomplish this mission.
