

Acknowledgements

The seed of this research project was sprouted through an exchange of ideas with my teacher and guide Professor Amrit Sen, who specialized in Eighteenth-Century Studies. First and foremost, I would like to acknowledge my gratitude to Professor Amrit Sen, Department of English and Other Modern European Languages, Visva Bharati for guiding me through this research work and providing me with relevant books from his collection. He was ever resourceful in his constructive criticism of my arguments and he checked the entire manuscript of my dissertation with warmth and patience.

I am grateful to Professor Tapati Gupta, Department of English, the University of Calcutta for kindly presiding over my pre-submission seminar. She suggested certain modifications, which I have duly incorporated. I would like to record my gratitude to my teachers at the Department of English and Other Modern European Languages, Visva Bharati, especially to Prof. Somdatta Mondal, Prof. Tanuka Das and Dr. Dipankar Roy for helping me to get through the formal hurdles of the pre-submission seminar. I received valuable suggestions regarding the preparation of the bibliography from them.

I owe many thanks to Dr. Arindam Sinha, faculty, Rampurhat College, for his lucid explanation of the philosophy of Hobbes in the context of my research. I am grateful to Dr. Susanta Kumar Bardhan, faculty, Suri Vidyasagar College for helping me with a rare book on eighteenth-century England from IAS, Simla. I also thank Prof. Aparna Majumdar, faculty, Shibpur Dinabandhu College, Howrah for providing me with rare books on Hogarth from the National Library, Kolkata. The staff of the Central Library, Visva Bharati, IAS, Simla, and National Library, Kolkata provided me with valuable books and journals. I am grateful to JSTOR, Project Muse, Google

Books, The Web Gallery of Art, Google Images and Olga's Gallery for enabling me to access critical articles, books and paintings on the web.

I thank Prof. Sunando Bandyopadhyay, Department of Geography, Calcutta University, as he is my guide in all things relating to photo-editing and formatting. I would like to thank Mr. Sujay Lahiri for helping me with the final formatting of the dissertation. I am obliged to Mr. Biswanath Banerjee, Research Scholar, Department of English, Visva Bharati, for thoroughly proofreading the entire dissertation. I am grateful to my friend, Mr. Sourav Kanungoe, for his patient and perceptive support.

My greatest debt is to my parents Prof. Ashok Majumdar and Dr. Santwana Majumdar for their unfailing support through years of my research and writing of the dissertation. My father's extensive collection of books on philosophy and the visual arts, and my mother's discussions on the aesthetic philosophy of Kant helped me immensely in conducting my research. Their genuine advice always uplifted my morale during phases of uncertainty. I record my sincere gratitude to these pillars of strength who guided me through my most difficult moments.
